CENSUS OF IRELAND FOR THE YEAR 1861.

REPORT ON RELIGION AND EDUCATION.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY GEORGE WILLIAM FREDERICK, EARL OF CARLISLE, K.G., LORD LIEUTENANT GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND,
&c., &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

INTRODUCTION.

We, the Commissioners appointed under the 23rd and 24th Victoria, cap. 62, to take an account of the population of Ireland for the night of the 7th of April, 1861, have now the honour to submit our Report upon the distribution of the people, according to the several forms of Religion professed in the country. In this Report we have thought it advisable to include the Educational Statistics of the principal religious bodies, upon the plan followed in our Report on Ages and Education, submitted to your Excellency on the 24th of June, 1863.

The circumstance, that the enumeration of the people according to their Religious belief, now, for the first time, forms part of the decennial Census, suggests to us the propriety of briefly reviewing what has hitherto been done, or attempted, in the way of classifying the population of Ireland in this most important particular.

PREVIOUS ENUMERATIONS.

Petty's "Political Anatomy of Ireland, 1672."

The first statement which we have been able to discover touching the relative numbers of the inhabitants of this country distinguishing their religious professions, occurs in Sir William Petty's "Political Anatomy of Ireland," published in the year 1691, but referable, apparently, to Christmas of the year 1672.* In Chapter II. of that treatise, we find the following classification of the inhabitants :—

"There are of people, men, women, and children,	1,100,000
There are of Families,	200,000
Of Smoaks,	250,000
Viz.:
Of the people, there are English,	200,000
Of Papists,	800,000
Of Non-Papists,	300,000
Scots,	100,000
Irish,	800,000

The Scots are Presbyterians, and the Irish, Papists. But the English are above 100,000 legal Protestants, or Conformists, and the rest are Presbyterians, Independants, Anabaptists, and Quakers."

The above classification is of two kinds—Ethnological and Religious. Combining both, the result, reduced to modern expression, will stand as follows :—

Irish—Roman Catholics,			800,000
English—	Established Church,	above 100,000	200,000
	Protestant Dissenters,	under 100,000
Scotch—Presbyterians,			100,000
Total,			1,100,000

Sir William Petty does not state by what process he arrived at these results, nor does he anywhere give the basis of his calculations. It is evident, however, that he pretends to give nothing more than the estimated numbers of the several religious bodies, and that, even if we allow his figures to have approximated somewhat closely to the real numbers, his ethnological distribution of the people, according to religions, is not historically accurate. There can be little doubt that there were many Roman Catholics of English descent, and many Irish who were Protestant, at that period. Indeed, his own pages furnish sufficient evidence to show that, although it may have been near the truth to say that the inhabitants of Irish race were all Roman Catholics, it would not have been true to affirm, as he did, the converse proposition—that all the Roman Catholics were Irish. Thus, in Chapter VII., we find a passage necessarily implying what we otherwise know to be the fact, that many amongst the descendants of the original English settlers were Roman Catholics:—"The differences," he says, "between the old Irish and old English Papists are asleep now, because they have a common enemy." And, in Chapter XIII. of the same treatise, the following passage occurs, confirmatory of the inference to be derived from the foregoing:—"English in Ireland, growing poor and discontented, degenerate into Irish; and, vice versâ, Irish, growing into wealth and favour, reconcile to the English." The meaning of this statement is, that the lower order of the English Protestants, yielding to the influences of association and intermarriage with the like order of the Irish, became Irish in feeling and Roman Catholic in religion; while those of the Irish who, through prosperity, were brought into contact with the ruling class of the English, underwent corresponding influences, and changed their feelings of nationality and their religion. At all events, the last two extracts are inconsistent with the purport of the tabular statement first quoted—that the religious distinctions of the inhabitants of Ireland were altogether coincident with their divisions into race.

We notice these matters as giving to Sir William Petty's computation rather the character of an estimate, not, perhaps, very wide of the truth, but, at the same time, not statistically accurate; while, on the other hand, it must be admitted that his great experience, acquired as Surveyor-General, must have enabled him to form a closer estimate of the relative numbers of the several religious bodies in Ireland than could be attempted by any other person at the time.

Occupations of the People in 1672.

Although Petty classifies the occupations of the people generally, he does not follow up this classification according to religions. It may be collected, however, first, as to the ownership of land, that two-thirds of all the profitable land held in fee-simple, or for any of the estates usually created under family settlements, belonged to Protestants, principally of the Established Church, and the remaining third to Roman Catholics.* It is not to be inferred from this fact that, as a class, the Protestant owners of land were more numerous than the Roman Catholic. On the contrary, it is probable, that the excess of land belonging to Protestants over that in the hands of Roman Catholics, was caused not by the greater number of Protestant proprietors, but by the greater extent of their possessions. Secondly, as to the occupation and tillage of land;—everything leads us to conclude that, save in the Province of Ulster, the occupiers and tillers of the soil were, with few exceptions, Roman Catholics. In that province, the Presbyterians of Scottish race were numerous as tenant-farmers, but throughout the rest of Ireland, the middle class Protestant inhabitants naturally sought the shelter of towns, and especially of fortified towns, in preference to dispersing their small number amid a hostile population. Thirdly, as to trade and commerce;—we are warranted in concluding that nearly all the trade, commerce, and practice of the mechanical arts were confined to Protestants, and we base this conclusion upon the fact stated by Petty, that not one-eighth of the property in houses having one chimney and upwards, belonged to "other than English Protestants;"† while of house property of the like class in walled and corporate towns, the proper seats of trade, manufactures, and commerce, a still smaller proportion—one-tenth at most‡—belonged to Roman Catholics. Fourthly, as to the practice of the liberal professions;—Petty estimates the number of Roman Catholic clergy at 3,000, and of the Protestant clergy at 500. We know that the practice of the other liberal professions was not closed to Roman Catholics until after the Revolution of 1688, but we have no means of ascertaining in what proportions they were filled by Protestants and Roman Catholics. Fifthly, as to office-holders under the Crown;—all the higher departments of the Administration were necessarily filled by members of the Established Church.§ Sixthly, as to what Petty calls the "civil militia" of the kingdom, consisting of persons engaged in executing the processes of courts of law, from the sheriff downwards, and numbering, according to his estimate, 3,000—one-tenth of the number, or 300, appear to have been Protestants, the remaining nine-tenths, or 2,700, were Roman Catholics.‖ Seventhly, as to the "military militia," numbering 24,000; in Chapter VII. of the treatise the entire is stated to have been Protestant. And, lastly, as to the general condition of the inhabitants;—Petty states, that of the 800,000 Roman Catholics, 75,000 were beyond the necessity of corporal labour;¶ while of the remaining 725,000, nearly 700,000 were the inhabitants of one hundred and sixty-thousand "wretched nasty cabbins, without chimney, window, or door-shut, and worse than those of the savage Americans."¶ The occupations of the Irish in 1672 are stated more generally and comprehensively in other parts of the "Political Anatomy," but not classified according to religions. They shall be referred to in our volume upon the occupations of the people.

Returns made by Hearth Money Collectors in 1732–3.

The next attempt, founded upon anything like reliable statistics, to compute the numbers of the Irish people, distinguishing religions, was made in 1736, in connexion with the returns of the hearth-money collectors, furnished to the Hearth-Money Office, Dublin, in the years 1732 and 1733. Agreeably to the instructions of the Hearth-Money Commissioners, the collectors of that tax reported to their superiors the religion of every family liable thereto. The number of families returned for all Ireland was 105,501 Protestant; 281,401 Roman Catholic—total, 386,902. From this return were excluded the army serving at the time in Ireland, the shipping population, the inmates of public institutions, and families resident in more than 2,000 houses, not rated for hearth-money by reason of their small value. Each family was estimated to consist of five persons, and experience, carried forward to our own time, has proved the correctness of that estimate. The number of Protestants, therefore, without distinction of Conformists and Dissenters, was calculated to be 527,505, and the number of Roman Catholics, 1,407,005, making together, 1,934,510. The rate-paying Protestants, so to speak, were, therefore, to the rate-paying Roman Catholics, in the proportion of three to eight. Some additions, however, require to be made, both to the Protestant and Roman Catholic population, in order to represent, with some degree of accuracy, the total population of the island. The compilers of the abstract from which the foregoing figures have been taken, state the number of the army serving at the time in Ireland, to have been 12,000, or equivalent to 2,400 families, all of whom were reckoned as Protestants. The wives and children of the military, the inmates of public institutions, and "many" servants from Great Britain, are reckoned in the abstract as equivalent to 4,660 families, making, with the army, 7,060 families, or 35,300 persons, all accounted Protestants. This would carry the gross number of Protestants to 562,805; but the accuracy of this supplemental estimate, except as concerns the military, may be doubted. The abstract suggests no addition to the number of the Roman Catholics as returned by the collectors; but it seems more than probable, that the inmates of the 2,000 houses exempted from the tax by reason of their poverty, should be added to the Roman Catholic side. Allowing one family to each house, we should have 2,000 families, or 10,000 persons, to increase the number of the Roman Catholics, who might thus be computed at 1,417,005. The population of Ireland, therefore, estimated in this way, would have been, in 1732—Protestants of all denominations, 562,805; Roman Catholics, 1,417,005; total, 1,979,810.

Previous Enumerations.

Returns made by Hearth-Money Collectors in 1732–3.

This enumeration or computation of the respective numbers of Protestants and Roman Catholics in Ireland, is even less satisfactory than that by Petty, inasmuch as it neither attempts to distinguish between the different denominations of Protestants, nor to give any idea, however imperfect, of the occupations or social position of Protestant and Roman Catholic. The difference between the proportion of the two religions for some of the Northern counties, as given in 1732 and in 1861, seems wholly inexplicable, unless upon the supposition of great inaccuracy in the returns of the hearth-money collectors. In the County of Donegal, for instance, where the proportion of Protestant to Roman Catholic families is stated to have been as eleven to eight in 1732; the proportion of Protestants to Roman Catholics in the same county for the year 1861, has been found to be pretty nearly as one to three. This change in the proportion can hardly be ascribed to immigration, as in the case of Dublin and other large towns, seeing that Donegal continues up to the present time one of the districts in Ireland least likely to attract immigration. But, even supposing the number of rate-paying families, Protestant and Roman Catholic, to have been correctly returned in 1732, it seems highly probable that the number of "certificate" or untaxed houses, and consequently of families who, by reason of their poverty, were excused from paying hearth-money, must have been greatly under-estimated, as somewhat more than 2,000. In 1672, Petty stated, that nearly 700,000 of the Irish inhabited 160,000 cabins with neither chimney, door, stairs, nor window; and it is hardly to be credited that the number of these wretched dwellings could have been reduced in the course of sixty years, the interval between 1672 and 1732, from 160,000 to somewhat more than 2,000. While it is possible, therefore, that the Protestant and Roman Catholic families liable to hearth-money may have been returned with tolerable accuracy, it can hardly be doubted that the Roman Catholic population of Ireland at that period would be much under-estimated if calculated upon the basis of the hearth-money returns.

The third enumeration of the Irish people, according to religions,—but the first made under express authority, and with official guarantees,—took place in 1834, when a Royal Commission was appointed for inquiring into the state of religious and other instruction then existing in Ireland. It bore date the 15th August, 1834, and was addressed to twenty-two Commissioners, therein named. It directed one or more of the Commissioners to visit every parish in Ireland, and to ascertain and report, amongst other matters, "the number of members of, or persons in communion with, the United Church of England and Ireland in each benefice or parish, distinguishing in the cases of such benefices as comprise more than one parish, the number belonging to each parish separately, and to the union collectively; and also to state the distances of the parishes in each union from each other respectively;" and also—number of persons usually attending the service in each, and to state generally whether those numbers have been for the last five years increasing, stationary, or diminishing.

"To ascertain the number of the several other places of worship belonging to Roman Catholics or Presbyterians, and other Protestant Dissenters, and the number of ministers officiating in each; the proportion of the population of each parish belonging to each of such persuasions respectively; the periods at which divine service is performed in each of their chapels, and the average number of persons usually attending the service in each; and to state generally, whether those numbers have been for the last five years increasing, stationary, or diminishing.

"To ascertain the state of each parish with reference to the means of education, the number and description of schools, the kind of instruction afforded therein, the average attendance at each, and the sources from which they are supported; and to state generally whether the numbers attending the same for the last five years have been increasing, stationary, or diminishing.

"To inquire generally whether adequate provision is now made for the religious instruction and for the general education of the people of Ireland; and to report such other circumstances connected with the moral and political relations of the Church Establishment, and the religious institutions of other denominations dissenting from the Established Church, as may bring clearly into view their bearings on the general condition of the people of that part of our said United Kingdom called Ireland."

From this extract it will be perceived that the inquiries of the Commissioners of Public Instruction in 1834 extended to several matters which do not come within the scope of the present inquiry; and that other subjects reported on by those Commissioners, such as the general education of the people, are dealt with in our volume on Ages and Education, already published. On the other hand, the present Census returns afforded us the means of ascertaining the occupations of the members of the various religious bodies, the state of education in each, and other circumstances not inquired into by the Commissioners of 1834.

The Commissioners of Public Instruction did not take an original Census of the people, but, "after duly considering the great expense, the prospect of delay, and other inconveniences incidental to an entirely new enumeration (involving a classification into religious denominations) of the population of Ireland, determined upon making the population returns for 1831 the basis of [their] operations." That Census was, however—as shown by the Report of the Census Commissioners of 1841, and as acknowledged by the Commissioners of 1834 themselves—defective and inaccurate in many respects. And it is "observable," add these latter, "that in proceeding upon the Census of 1831, the religion of 18,951 persons included therein could not be now [1834] ascertained, on account of changes of residence." Copies of the Census returns of 1831 were made, leaving a column for the insertion of the religious persuasion of each individual opposite to his name, and transmitted to the Enumerators, who had been previously employed, and who were very generally found available for that purpose. Query lists were also addressed "to the ministers of religion of all persuasions officiating in the respective parishes of Ireland," as well as to the Enumerators. "To these queries," say the Commissioners in their Report, "we have been furnished by the clergy of the Established Church with answers relating to 1,390 parishes; by the Roman Catholic clergy with answers relating to 868 parishes; by Presbyterian ministers with answers relating to 210 parishes; and by the Enumerators with answers relating to all the parishes in Ireland."

The Census of Religions so prepared was then deposited in some public place in or near each parish, and left open to inspection for fourteen days, after which one of the Commissioners visited the district and received evidence upon the subject. The Commissioners likewise addressed circular letters to the resident clergy of all denominations, apprizing them of the course about to be adopted, and requesting their co-operation; they also directed the Enumerators to place themselves in communication with the clergy, and to solicit from them such information as they might be able to supply. The duty of the Enumerators was limited, in the first instance, to entering the religious persuasion of each person already enumerated in 1831 opposite to the name of such person. The verification of those entries, the insertion of new names, and matters of a similar kind, were reserved for the occasions upon which each parish was to be visited by one or more of the Commissioners empowered to take evidence on oath touching these several particulars. In many instances, the Commissioners were furnished with original returns by the resident clergy, which returns were themselves verified by evidence, and used for the purpose as well of supplying new entries as for checking those of the Enumerators.

The following was the result of the inquiry in 1834:—

Members of the Established Church.	Roman Catholics.	Presbyterians.	Protestant Dissenters.	Total.
853,160	6,436,060	643,058	21,822	7,954,100

Or 1,518,040 Protestants, and 6,436,060 Roman Catholics.

It is no part of our duty, upon the present occasion, to weigh the reasons which governed the discretion of the Commissioners of Public Instruction in adopting the returns of 1831 as the basis of their religious Census, and in resorting to the somewhat complex machinery which the course so adopted rendered necessary. It was, however, attended by certain disadvantages which the Commissioners themselves did not conceal, and which would not have been incidental to an original Census. The principal of these was the resort to computation, in the absence of the actual figures which an original Census would have supplied. Thus, when, having classified according to religions the population returned in 1831, it became necessary to complete it, so as to give the actual population similarly classified for 1834, the Commissioners, if no satisfactory original Census was tendered to them, proceeded to supply its place by a computation, founded upon the probable rate of increase or decrease in the population of each parish between the years 1821 and 1831, which rate they assumed to have been maintained up to the year 1834. They then distributed this increase or decrease amongst the several religious bodies, in the proportions ascertained for them by the classified returns of 1831, having first made allowance in each case for extraordinary decrease by mortality or emigration, or for extraordinary increase by immigration, whenever any of these disturbing influences should have been ascertained by evidence to have taken place. Their classification of religions is much less minute than our own, and consisted of only the four principal divisions of—Established Church, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and other Protestant Dissenters. The classification for 1861, in addition to columns for the three first-named persuasions, has columns for Methodists, Independents, Baptists, the Society of Friends, Jews, and "All other Persuasions." The Commissioners of 1834 admit to considerable confusion in the classification of Protestant Dissenters. The Wesleyan Methodists, by a peculiarity of their constitution, although frequenting places of worship distinct from those of the Established Church, very generally declined to be reckoned as Dissenters, and were therefore included amongst the members of the Established Church, but nevertheless had their numbers given by computation from the evidence collected by the Commissioners respecting the places of worship in each parish. A similar course was adopted in the case of other Protestant bodies avowedly dissenting from the Established Church.

PREVIOUS ENUMERATIONS.

Commission of Public Instruction, Ireland, 1834.

The returns for 1834 were, according to the representation of the Commissioners, less accurate for the civic than for the rural districts—the former consisting, as in 1861, of a group of houses containing not less than 2,000 inhabitants. While the Commissioners considered that more or less of error was incident to the enumeration of the inhabitants of Belfast, Waterford, Limerick, and Cork, they regarded the returns from the city of Dublin as less faithworthy still, by reason of the Capital containing a larger and more fluctuating proportion of poor; and while naming certain parishes, the returns for which they were led to believe contained a large number of errors, they reported the result of the general enumeration to be, upon the whole, not very wide of the truth. In our returns, upon the other hand, nothing has been left to computation, the numbers of the people having been taken for a single night, as in previous decennial Censuses; and making allowance for such slight miscarriages as are unavoidable in operations of so large a nature, we have no reason to doubt that the revised numbers of the population for the night of the 7th of April, 1861, accurately represent the amount and distribution of the several religious professions throughout the population of Ireland.

There is another important feature of difference between the procedure of the Commissioners of Public Instruction and our own. They made their enumeration according to the ecclesiastical divisions; while ours, as forming part of the decennial Census, has been taken according to the civil divisions of the country. The divisions adopted by the Commissioners of Public Instruction were, parishes or benefices, dioceses, and ecclesiastical provinces;—the territorial divisions followed by ourselves were, as already stated in our Report on Ages and Education, the civil parish, the barony, the county, and the civil province.

RELIGIOUS INQUIRY OF 1861.

According to the provisions of the Census Act, 23 & 24 Vic., cap. 62, for the year 1861, we were directed to inquire into the Religious Professions of the people; and for that purpose inserted a column upon the A. Form, or Family Schedule, with the following instructions for filling it up:—

"RELIGIOUS PROFESSION.—To prevent errors, and in order that each individual may be correctly enumerated, under this head, it is particularly requested that Protestants who are members of the United Church of England and Ireland shall describe themselves as of the "Established Church," that members of the Roman Catholic Church shall describe themselves as "Roman Catholics," and that Protestants of the Presbyterian Church shall use the word "Presbyterian" opposite to their respective names. Individuals belonging to any other Religious Denomination or Sect are requested to describe themselves by that particular name or title by which they are most generally known."

The members of each religious body have, therefore, been classified according to the designations chosen by themselves; and in the case of Protestant Dissenters, we believe that their numbers and various denominations will be found to have been stated with as much accuracy as is attainable in returns to inquiries such as ours.

ENUMERATION IN 1861.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSIONS.

the Army and Navy serving in Ireland, and some Merchant Seamen, and others, was stated to be—

Roman Catholics,	4,490,583	Jews,	322
Members of the Established Church,	678,661	Members of other Persuasions,	8,414
Protestant Dissenters,	586,563
		Total,	5,764,543

According to the numbers, since carefully revised in detail after the manner which we shall presently explain, the population of Ireland for the night of the 7th April, 1861, similarly classified, but including the men of the Army, Navy, and Merchant Seamen, was as follows:—

Roman Catholics,	4,505,265	Members of other Persuasions,	14,695
Members of the Established Church,	693,357	Unascertained,	4,103
Protestant Dissenters,	581,154
Jews,	393	Total,	5,798,967

Assuming that the persons included under the head of "Other Persuasions" were Protestant Dissenters, and excluding the 26,080 men of the Army, and 324 of the Navy, from which latter returns as to religion were received, the resident population of Ireland at the time of taking the Census in 1861 was 4,495,926 Roman Catholics, and 1,272,141 Protestants.

Under the head of "Protestant Dissenters," in the Enumeration Abstracts, were included Presbyterians, Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and Quakers.

Difference between Enumeration Abstracts and Revised Summary.

The difference between the numbers for all Ireland, as published in the "Enumeration Abstracts" on the 15th July, 1861, and those in the present revised Summary, is shown by the following Schedule, the sign (+) indicating error of too many, and the sign (—) error of too few:—

Paucity of errors in Enumerators' Abstracts.

The Enumerators' Abstracts were, as already stated in our original return in July, 1861, the totals compiled by the Enumerators themselves from the family schedules for every townland or street, each on an average amounting to 100, and often including the particulars of several hundred persons, hastily made up at the police barracks, after, perhaps, a hard day's out-door work, and were, with few exceptions, returned to this Office within a period of six weeks after the day appointed for taking the Census. And when it is recollected, that after the most careful revision, extending over a period of two years, during which the forms were independently examined for a variety of purposes, the difference between these Enumerators' Abstracts, compiled for the purpose of the Parliamentary Return of July, 1861, and the figures afforded after the careful and long continued scrutiny above alluded to, was only 4,888, or 8 in every 10,000 of the population;—the manner in which the Constabulary and Metropolitan Police who acted as Enumerators discharged their duties excites our admiration, and should induce even more than usual confidence to be placed in the returns of the present Census.† The clerical and arithmetical errors were, as might be expected from the vast extent of the work, and the various degrees of education of the persons engaged on it, pretty numerous, still, as appears by the Schedule, they balanced each other so as to produce only the small deficit stated above. With respect to the differences between the totals of Religious Professions published from the Enumerators' Abstracts, and the foregoing revised Summary, the errors resolve themselves into the following:—omission of Roman Catholics, 5,343, or 1 in every 841 of the total of that persuasion returned by the Enumerators; and excess of members of the Protestant persuasions, 1,497, or 1 in every 850, or nearly in the same relative proportion. The apparent surplus of 7,608 Presbyterians in the Enumerators' Abstracts is accounted for by the fact, that under that head were included a large number of persons who described themselves as "Covenanters," "Reformed Presbyterians," "United Presbyterians," "Unitarian Presbyterians," and "Non-Subscribing," "Remonstrant," "Seceding," "Orthodox," "Independent," "Dissenting," "Eastern Reformed," "Arminian," and "Baptist Presbyterians," as well as "Members of the General Assembly," but which classes have since been included under the head of "All other Persuasions." This transposition, the result of inquiries by us, more minute than the Enumerators were called upon to institute, consequently contributed to the increased number of "Dissenting Protestants," the errors of omission and addition nearly balancing each other. It is but justice to the Enumerators to state, that in being called upon to make a classified summary of the numbers of each Religious Profession within their districts, a duty was imposed upon them not required in any previous investigation.

Enumerators' Abstracts.

We also think it right to state, that instead of Books or Abstracts being prepared by the Enumerators and sent to this Office for statistical arrangement and report, that the original returns verified by affirmation before a magistrate were forwarded to us, and, from these alone, the tables now submitted to your Excellency were compiled. Furthermore, the Constabulary and Metropolitan Police force remaining, as it were, a standing army of Enumerators during the continuance of this Commission, has enabled us to make the most minute and searching inquiries into every circumstance connected with the details of the Census.

In the General Tables, "Protestants" (unspecified) are classed with "All other Persuasions," because it was only when the Summary of Ireland came under consideration that cause was found to transfer the persons so entered to the Established Church; but their numbers are specified in the foot-notes to each parish table. They amounted to 1,497, of which number all but 12 were, upon subsequent inquiry, found to belong to the Established Church; 4 belonged to the denomination called "Brethren;" and 8 described themselves as Protestants belonging to no particular sect or denomination, and have now been classed under the head of "All other Persuasions."

The groups composing the class of "All other Persuasions," as finally settled and arranged numerically, are given, with their respective numbers, in the following Schedule:—

Religious Professions.

Persons tabulated under the head of "All other Persuasions."

In the foregoing Schedule, which hardly requires or admits of much analysis, each person has been classed according to the precise designation adopted by himself or herself. Five only of the groups included amongst "All other Persuasions" amount to more than a thousand members, viz., "Unitarians," 3,800; "Covenanters," 2,756; "Reformed Presbyterians," 1,788; "Moravians," 1,180; and "Seceders," 1,139. In the six denominations of "Christian Brethren," "United Presbyterians," "Evangelical Unionists," "Separatists," "Lutherans," and "Unitarian Presbyterians," their numbers range from 763 to 201. Among "Non-subscribing Presbyterians," "Dissenters," "Free Church of Scotland," "Protestant Dissenters," "Christians—no particular sect," and "Plymouth Brethren," the numbers exceed 100, and are under 200. Twenty-four groups have more than 10 members, and less than 100; and forty-two have more than one and less than 10. Twenty-eight designations are represented by as many individuals, including one returned as an "unbeliever," and one as an "atheist." The comparatively large number of 72 have been returned as of "no religion." Upon inquiry we found that 7 of that number were children under 5 years of age, and presumed to be unable to answer for themselves. The religious profession of 971 persons returned upon our own forms—also of 2,282 Seamen and others of the Merchant Service, and of 850 of the Royal Navy, returned upon English Census Forms—remains unascertained.

Out of the list of "All other Persuasions," there are fifteen which expressly designate foreign communions, namely, the "Greek Church," "Swiss Protestants" "German Protestants," "French Protestants," "Swiss Church," "Church of Denmark," "Episcopal Church of America," "French Evangelical Church," "French Church," "Free Church of Switzerland," "Swiss Reformed Church," "Swedish Protestant," "Prussian Evangelical Church," "Italian Protestant," and the "Evangelical Waldensian Church." The professors of the religions indicated by these titles amounted to 81, and were all foreigners, with the exception of one "American Episcopalian," a native of Ireland. There were three other denominations, which chiefly consisted of foreigners, viz.:—"Lutheran," "Evangelical Church," and "Evangelical Protestant." Of the 254 persons adopting these latter denominations, it appeared that 11 only were natives of the United Kingdom, 10 of the number, including 6 children, being "Lutherans," and 1 an "Evangelical Protestant."

Verification of the Returns.

The registration and verification of the entries respecting religious profession were conducted in the following way:—First, the numbers upon each family return were extracted separately and independently, for "religions" by sexes, and also for "ages" by sexes, and where the numbers brought out by each process were not found to correspond, the error in compilation was sought for and corrected. Secondly, wherever the religious profession was obscurely or doubtfully expressed, or in cases where statements were made to us by letter affecting the correctness of the returns, a copy of the return was referred back to the Enumerator for explanation. Lastly, where the religion was not specified in the return, the Enumerators were directed to ascertain, if possible, the religious profession of the party in each instance by personal inquiry.

We received communications from only fifteen persons impugning the correctness of the returns as to religious profession, or demanding inquiry; five of these came from clergymen of the Established Church, three from Roman Catholic clergymen, one from a Presbyterian minister, three from private individuals, and three from members of the Constabulary Force. In each case special inquiry was instituted; and upon the statement of the parties themselves, concerning whom the returns had been made, the religious profession was altered from that given originally as regarded ten persons, and found to be correct in twenty-nine instances. In nine cases the complaint was that members of the Established Church had been wrongly returned as Presbyterians, and in fifteen the complaint was the reverse. In four cases it was complained that Roman Catholics had been entered as members of the Established Church—and in three instances the complaint was the other way; in eight, that members of the Established Church were returned as Methodists; and in one instance a person complained that he had been returned by his father as of the Established Church, whereas he belonged to "no sect." The general result was that six persons originally entered as members of the Established Church were re-entered as Presbyterians, two originally entered as Presbyterians were re-entered as of the Established Church, and in two instances persons originally entered as Roman Catholics were changed to Established Church. In all the other cases the returns were found to be in accordance with the wishes of the individuals themselves.

Result of Queries as to Religious Profession.

In all cases of doubtful returns of religious professions, queries were issued the replies to which determined with accuracy the religion of 5,440 out of 5,475 persons. Of this number 1,871 were found to belong to the Established Church, 2,907 to the Roman Catholic, 239 were registered as Presbyterians, 5 as Methodists, 8 as Independents, 6 as Baptists, 2 as Quakers, 259 as Seceders, and 143 as of the other designations under the head of "All other Persuasions." In 35 instances only the religious persuasion could not be obtained.

Printed image digitised by the University of Southampton Library Digitisation Unit

In the Schedule on page 7 it will be perceived that, independently of those persons returned upon English Shipping Census Forms, there are 971 entries stating the religion of individuals to be "Unknown." The difference between this number and the 35 mentioned on the foregoing page, is accounted for, in many cases, by the statement of the Enumerators on the original returns, that the persons whose religion had not been inserted were resident in the locality for the night only, and had left before the returns were collected.

Religious Professions.

We now proceed to submit the general result of the inquiry respecting religion, in Tables I., II., III., and IV., corresponding generally with Tables II., VI., and IX. of the Enumeration Abstracts of July, 1861; and showing respectively: First—The religious profession of the inhabitants of each province, county, and city, and of certain corporate towns, together with the proportion per cent. of each class. Secondly—The religious profession of the inhabitants in each Parliamentary borough. And thirdly—The number of inhabitants, and their religious professions, in each town containing a population of 1,500 persons and upwards.

Number and Percentage of Persons of each Religious Profession.

The relative numbers of the principal religious bodies in Ireland, as disclosed by the two following Tables, may be stated thus:—There were members of the Established Church, 693,357, or 11·9 per cent. of the total population; of Roman Catholics, 4,505,265, or 77·7 per cent.; of Presbyterians, 523,291, or 9·0 per cent.; of Methodists, 45,399, or 0·8 per cent.; of Independents, 4,532; Baptists, 4,237, and Society of Friends or Quakers, 3,695, or 0·1 per cent., respectively; of persons tabulated under the head of "All other Persuasions," there were 18,798, or 0·3 per cent.; and there were 393 Jews;—making in all a population of 5,798,967.

Ulster contains the largest number of persons in communion with the Established Church, the members of which (391,315) are 20·4 per cent. of the population of that province. In Leinster, the Established Church has 180,587 adherents, or 12·39 per cent. of the population of the province; in Munster, the members of the Established Church are 80,860, or 5·3 of the population; and in Connaught, where the members of the Established Church are fewest, absolutely and relatively, their number is 40,595, or 4·44 of the population.

The members of the Roman Catholic Church form the majority of the inhabitants in each of the four provinces, in three of which, Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, their numbers greatly preponderate; while in the fourth, Ulster, the majority is slight. In the case of the Established Church, the absolute corresponds with the relative number of its adherents in each of the provinces. The Roman Catholics are differently circumstanced, as in Ulster, where their relative percentage is smallest, their absolute number exceeds the entire population of Connaught, where the percentage of Roman Catholics is highest. As regards the absolute numbers of Roman Catholics, the provinces stand in the following order:—Munster, 1,420,076; Leinster, 1,252,553; Ulster, 966,613; Connaught, 866,023. As regards the relative number of the Roman Catholic inhabitants, the provinces take rank as follows:—Connaught, 94·8 per cent.; Munster, 93·8; Leinster, 85·9; and Ulster, 50·5.

The entire strength of the Presbyterian community may be said to be in the Province of Ulster, where its adherents amount to as many as 503,835, and its percentage to 26·3 of the total population of that province, being 5·9 in excess of that of the Established Church. In none of the remaining three provinces, however, does the proportion of the Presbyterians reach 1 per cent. In Leinster it is 0·85, and in Munster and Connaught, only 0·3 per cent. of the population of each province.

Percentage of Members of Established Church.

Out of the forty-four districts into which the provinces have been subdivided in the following Tables, that which contains the largest number of inhabitants belonging to the Established Church (60,905) is the county of Down, which, however, happens also to be the most populous of these subdivisions; but the relative number of the Established Church is smaller there than in some other of the counties. Of the counties, Waterford is that in which the Established Church has fewest members (3,323); and Clare that in which it is relatively weakest, the members of the Established Church forming only 2 per cent. of its population. The number of members of the Established Church in proportion to the rest of the population is greatest in the county of Fermanagh, 38·4 per cent. The suburbs of the city of Dublin follow, with 35 per cent., and the county of Armagh, with 30·9 per cent. In the counties of Down and Tyrone, and in the town of Belfast, the percentage of Established Church Protestants is over 20, and under 25. In the counties of Dublin (suburbs of the city excluded), Wicklow, Antrim, and Londonderry, in the county of the town of Carrickfergus, and in the city of Dublin, the members of the Established Church are more than 15, and under 20 per cent. In the King's and Queen's counties, and in the counties of Cavan, Carlow, Kildare, Donegal, and Monaghan, and in the city of Cork, their percentage is over 10, and under 15. In the counties of Longford, Louth, Meath, Westmeath, Wexford, Cork (East Riding), Cork (West Riding), Tipperary (North Riding), Leitrim, and Sligo, in the town of Drogheda, and cities of Kilkenny, Limerick, and Waterford, Protestants of the Established Church are over 5, and under 10 per cent. In the counties of Kilkenny, Limerick, Tipperary (South Riding), Kerry, and Roscommon, and in the town of Galway, the percentage of the same class exceeds 3, and is under 5. In the counties of Waterford, Galway, and Mayo, it exceeds 2, and is under 3; and, lastly, in the county of Clare, as already stated, the members of the Established Church are only 2 per cent. of its population.

In 38 out of the 44 subdivisions referred to, the members of the Roman Catholic Church constitute the majority of the inhabitants, and in 6 districts, namely, the counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, and Londonderry, the county of the town of Carrickfergus, and the town of Belfast, they are in a minority, more or less considerable. As concerns the relative strength of the Established, Roman Catholic, and Presbyterian Churches, in the six counties and towns mentioned, it may be stated thus:—In the county of the town of Carrickfergus, the members of the Established Church, although outnumbered by the Presbyterians, are more numerous than the Roman Catholics, the percentage of the three communities being—Presbyterians, 59·2; Established Church, 19·3; Roman Catholics, 11·1. In the counties of Antrim and Down, and in the town of Belfast, the Roman Catholics, although in a majority as regards the members of the Established Church, are fewer than the Presbyterians, the percentage being, for the county of Antrim, Presbyterians, 53·2; Roman Catholics, 24·8; Established Church, 18·3: for the county of Down—Presbyterians, 44·6; Roman Catholics, 32·5; Established Church, 20·3: and for the town of Belfast—Presbyterians, 35·0; Roman Catholics, 34·1; Established Church, 24·7. Lastly, in the county of Londonderry, the Roman Catholics, although more numerous than either of the great Protestant communities, are in the minority, as compared with both combined, the percentages being 45·3, against 35·1 Presbyterians, and 16·9 Established Church. Religious Professions.

The subdivision containing the largest absolute number of Roman Catholics, 264,754, is the East Riding of the county of Cork; that which has the largest relative number to its population is the county of Clare (97·8 per cent.). In the counties of Kilkenny, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary (South Riding), Waterford, Galway, Mayo, and Roscommon, the percentage of Roman Catholics is over 95, and under 97. In the counties of Longford, Louth, Meath, Westmeath, Wexford, Cork (East Riding), Cork (West Riding), Tipperary (North Riding), and Sligo, and in the towns of Drogheda and Galway, and city of Kilkenny, the percentage is over 90, and under 95. In the King's and Queen's counties, in the counties of Carlow, Kildare, Wicklow, Cavan, and Leitrim, and in the cities of Cork, Limerick, and Waterford, it exceeds 80, and is under 90. In the counties of Donegal, Dublin (exclusive of suburbs of city), and Monaghan, and in the city of Dublin, it is over 70, and under 80. In the suburbs of the city of Dublin, and in the counties of Fermanagh and Tyrone, it is over 55, and under 59. In the counties of Londonderry and Armagh it is over 45, and under 49. In the county of Down and town of Belfast it is over 32, and under 35. In the county of Antrim it is 24·8; and, lastly, in the county of the town of Carrickfergus, the percentage is 11·1. Percentage of Roman Catholics.

Following up the analysis of the Tables, in the cases of the Presbyterians, it appears that the county of Down is that in which they are most numerous, amounting there to 133,796. This number, however, is closely approached by that of the Presbyterian population of the county of Antrim—131,687. The district in Table I. which contains the smallest Presbyterian population is the city of Kilkenny (97). The percentage of Presbyterians is highest in the county of the town of Carrickfergus, where it amounts to 59·2; and in the county of Antrim, where it is 53·2; showing that in both these places the Presbyterians are a clear majority of the population. In the county of Antrim and the county of the town of Carrickfergus, the percentage of the Presbyterians is over 53, and under 60; in the county of Down it is 44·6; in the county of Londonderry, 35·1; in the town of Belfast, 35; in the counties of Donegal, Monaghan, Armagh, and Tyrone, 11, and under 20; in the counties of Louth, Cavan, and Fermanagh, in the suburbs of Dublin city, in the cities of Dublin, Waterford, and Cork, and in the towns of Drogheda and Galway, 1 and under 4; and in the remaining counties and towns of Ireland under 1. Percentage of Presbyterians.

Some of the principal results of the foregoing analysis, may be thus shortly stated, by way of summary. General Analysis of the Religious Profession of the Population.

While the members of the Established Church do not constitute a majority, or the principal section, of the population in any of the counties or towns included in Tables I. and II., they form in one district (the county of the town of Carrickfergus), a majority compared with the Roman Catholics, and a majority over the Presbyterians in thirty-nine; that is to say, in all the districts, except the counties of Antrim, Down, and Londonderry, the county of the town of Carrickfergus, and the town of Belfast.

The Roman Catholics have the absolute majority over all other sections of the population taken together in thirty-eight of the divisions, or in all, except the counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, and Londonderry, the county of the town of Carrickfergus, and the town of Belfast. They are more numerous than the members of the Established Church in every county and city, except the county of the town of Carrickfergus, as already stated. In two counties, namely, those of Armagh and Londonderry, they are more numerous than the Presbyterians, but are in a minority when compared with the other sections collectively; and in four places, the counties of Antrim and Down, the county of the town of Carrickfergus, and the town of Belfast, they are outnumbered by the Presbyterians. The last-named body has the absolute majority over all other sections of the population collectively in the county of Antrim and county of the town of Carrickfergus; it forms the largest section in the county of Down and town of Belfast, but is in a minority of the entire population. In the county of Londonderry it has a majority over the members of the Established Church, but is in a minority, as compared with the Roman Catholics. In the counties of Donegal,

Religious Professions.

General Analysis.

Monaghan, and Tyrone, the Presbyterians are almost as numerous as the members of the Established Church; and in all the remaining counties of Ireland they are a fractional minority of the population. Except in a few instances, the proportion of the other religious professions to the population seldom reaches one per cent. The Methodists, who form the most numerous body after the Presbyterians, reach their highest percentage (4·1) in the town of Belfast.

Parliamentary Boroughs.

The Parliamentary boroughs, of which there are thirty-three, differ not unfrequently in area and population from the towns of the same name, the borough sometimes including a margin of rural district within its boundary, and sometimes excluding a portion of the town proper. Owing to the importance of the Parliamentary boroughs, in a constitutional point of view, they are classed apart from the other districts in the following Table.

According to this Table, the entire population of the thirty-three Parliamentary boroughs is 797,467 persons, of whom 132,120, or 16·6 per cent. belong to the Established, 593,567, or 74·4 per cent. to the Roman Catholic, and 54,407, or 6·8 per cent., to the Presbyterian Church, leaving for the various other religious persuasions 17,373, or the proportion of but 2·2 per cent. Taken together, the Protestant population of the boroughs amounts to 203,562. The Jews are 338. In the borough of Lisburn, the members of the Established Church are the largest section, but neither a majority nor a moiety of the population. In the boroughs of Carrickfergus and Coleraine they are in a was 158, of which number 127 had 2,000 and upwards. The total population of these 158 towns was 1,161,688, divided as follows amongst the several religious professions:—Established Church, 199,015; Roman Catholics, 836,280; Presbyterians, 97,947; Methodists, 18,118; Independents, 2,157; Baptists, 1,251; Society of Friends, 1,675; Jews, 361; all other persuasions, 4,864. The entire Protestant population of these towns was 325,047.

In the towns of Dromore (county of Down), Lurgan, and Portadown (county of Armagh), Portobello, in the suburbs of Dublin, and Lisburn, in the counties of Antrim and Down, the members of the Established Church form the largest section of the population, but majority as regards Roman Catholics, and in a minority compared with Presbyterians. In the borough of Belfast they are in the minority as compared either with Roman Catholics or Presbyterians, and in the remaining twenty-nine boroughs they form the minority, as compared with Roman Catholics, and a majority over Presbyterians, except in Londonderry, where the Presbyterians are more numerous than the members of the Established Church. Religious Professions. Parliamentary Boroughs.

In twenty-eight of the thirty-three boroughs, the Roman Catholics have an absolute majority. The boroughs in which they are not so circumstanced being the four already mentioned, and the borough of Downpatrick, in which last, as in the borough of Belfast, the Roman Catholics are the largest section of the population, but not a moiety of the entire.

The Presbyterians have an absolute majority in the borough of Carrickfergus only. In the boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry they are more numerous than the members of the Established Church, but fewer than the Roman Catholics. In the borough of Coleraine they are more numerous than the members of the Established Church or Roman Catholics, while in all the remaining boroughs they are in the minority as compared with either.

The Table upon pages 16 to 19 appeared for the first time in the "Enumeration Abstracts" for 1861, and is of much interest as including the entire civic population of Ireland, in an area more extensive than has hitherto been assigned to it.

Religious Professions in Civic Districts.

than a moiety of the entire population. In the remaining 137 towns, the members of the Roman Catholic Church are the largest section of the population, and in 130 they constitute the absolute majority. In the following seven towns—Aughnacloy and Cookstown, county of Tyrone; Downpatrick and Gilford, in the county of Down; Whitehouse Upper, in the county of Antrim; Newbridge, in the county of Kildare; and Ranelagh, in the suburbs of Dublin—although the Roman Catholics are the most numerous, they are outnumbered by the total of the Protestant or other religious professions.

The minimum of 1,500 inhabitants, appointed by law for towns within the operation of the Towns Improvement Act (17 & 18 Vic., cap. 103), is less by 500 than the number assumed in the present as well as former Census publications to constitute a town "a civic district." It may, therefore, be regarded as creating for Ireland a statutory limitation of rural and civic districts, in which the area and population of the former are diminished by the transfer to the latter of several towns which, in our other publications, are comprised within the rural districts. Reducing to a percentage the numbers of each religious profession in the total population of towns subject to the operation of the 17 & 18 Vic., cap. 103, and treating this population as the statutory civic population of Ireland, we obtain the following results:—

Members of the Established Church,	17·13	Baptists,	0·11
Roman Catholics,	71·99	Society of Friends,	0·14
Presbyterians,	8·43	Members of other Persuasions,	0·42
Methodists,	1·56	Total Protestants,	27·98
Independents,	0·19	Jews,	0·03

By deducting from the civic population, as constituted by the 17 and 18 Vic., cap. 103, the population of towns having less than 2,000 inhabitants, the usual Census division into civic and rural is re-established, and according thereto, the proportion per cent. of the various religious denominations within the Census civic district appears to be the following:—

Members of the Established Church,	17·17	Baptists,	0·11
Roman Catholics,	72·01	Society of Friends,	0·14
Presbyterians,	8·33	Members of other Persuasions,	0·43
Methodists,	1·59	Total Protestants,	27·96
Independents,	0·19	Jews,	0·03

The following statement shows the proportion per cent. of the population belonging to the several religions in the Parliamentary Boroughs, and in the Statutory and Census Rural and Civic Districts of Ireland, respectively:—

Districts.		Established Church.	Roman Catholics.	Presbyterians.	Other Persuasions.

Ecclesiastical Divisions.

Provinces.

Provinces.—The term "province" was borrowed by the church from the familiar civil division so called, to denote the group of dioceses within the jurisdiction of the same Archbishop. The Archbishop's See was called the Metropolis or parent city of the spiritual colonies represented by the several dioceses within its jurisdiction. In the early ages of Christianity the analogy, which this designation implied, was perfectly correct, as the Sees of the provinces had in fact been established by missions from the mother church. In later times metropolitan rank was conferred upon Episcopal Sees, and dioceses were grouped in provinces upon different principles. The four ecclesiastical provinces of Ireland—Armagh, Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam—existed prior to the English invasion, the pallium having been conferred upon the four archbishops of these places by Cardinal Paparo, the Papal Legate, at the Synod of Kells, in 1152.

Dioceses.

Dioceses.—This word, as employed to express the territorial jurisdiction of a Bishop, is of high antiquity. In the fourth century the term "diocese" was borrowed by the Christian emperors from the ecclesiastical polity, to designate an important civil division. It was the subdenomination to the prefecture, but a multiple of the province. The term is now confined exclusively to ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The bishops of a province are called suffragans—a term indicative of their ancient right, now in disuse—to elect the Metropolitan. The number of dioceses, including metropolitan Sees, in Ireland is—for the Established Church, thirty-three, governed by two archbishops and ten bishops; and for the Roman Catholic Church, thirty-four, governed by four archbishops and twenty-six bishops. The establishment of the existing Irish dioceses, with the exception of the Roman Catholic see of Galway, is known to date from a period long anterior to the English invasion. Ecclesiastical Divisions.

Parishes.—The term "parish" has for many hundred years been applied exclusively to the district under the spiritual charge of a "parochus" or pastor of souls. It comes to us from the Greek in two Latin forms, "parochia" and "parœcia," both of great antiquity in their ecclesiastical meaning. The derivation of the former is referred to "parochus" (πάροχος), the title of the officer, whose duty it was in Greek and Roman times to minister to the wants of persons travelling in the public service,* and the same designation is poetically given by Horace to the host or entertainer at a feast.† By an easy metaphor the Christian pastor was styled the "parochus" or provider of his flock, as ministering to their spiritual sustenance; and the district committed to his charge was called "parochia," or parish. The second form, "parœcia" (παροικία), "neighbourhood" or "residence," was at an early period synonymous with diocese, or the territorial jurisdiction of a bishop,‡ but seems to have been used almost from the beginning in the narrower sense ascribed to it by modern practice.§ It is not necessary in this place to inquire how far the parochial system was developed in Ireland at the period of the English invasion, but it may be right to allude to one circumstance as accounting for the application to parishes in the Established Church of certain terms not used to designate any of the Roman Catholic parishes. Prior to the suppression of monasteries by Henry VIII. the benefices of numerous parishes in Ireland as well as in England were vested in religious houses, who administered the parishes by vicars, chosen from the secular or parochial clergy; to the monasteries belonged the great or rectorial tithes, while the small or vicarial tithes were the stipend of the vicar. This state of things was brought to an end, so far as the monasteries were concerned, by the suppression of these institutions; but as regards the allocation of church property, the distinction between rectorial and vicarial tithes has been preserved along with that property in the Established Church, and hence we find the terms "rectory" and "vicarage" applied to many of its parishes. In the Roman Catholic Church "parish" is the only word employed to designate the pastoral charge of a parish priest. As has been already observed in the Report on Ages and Education, page 2, there are three classes of parishes in Ireland—the parish of the Established Church; the civil parish, generally corresponding with, but sometimes differing from, the former; and the Roman Catholic parish, frequently differing from both. In the two churches the parish is a changing territorial area, and in the Established Church the changes, which are all regulated by law, very generally draw after them a change in boundary of the civil parish. It is easy to understand how changes become necessary in parishes, to meet the requirements of the cure of souls; but while allowing the utmost freedom for those changes in the ecclesiastical parish, we venture to suggest that for statistical and even for administrative purposes, it would be desirable that the boundaries of so important and well known a territorial division as the parish should, if possible, be fixed once for all, or at least, be rendered less shifting than at present. The number of civil parishes in Ireland, at the date of taking the Census (1861) was 2,428. Parishes.

Without attempting to define minutely the limits of the various dioceses that have existed in Ireland since the introduction of Christianity, it will be safe for us to state that, at the period of the Reformation, the ecclesiastical division of the country was into four provinces, containing thirty-four dioceses, whereof ten belonged to the Province of Armagh, five to the Province of Dublin, twelve to that of Cashel, and seven to Tuam. Although the four ecclesiastical provinces corresponded popularly with the four civil provinces of Ulster, Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, the actual difference between the ecclesiastical and civil Provinces was very considerable. The Province of Armagh was by much the most extensive of the four, including not only the entire of Ulster, but a large portion of the civil Province of Leinster, comprised in the dioceses of Armagh, Meath, and Ardagh, and a small portion of the civil Province of Connaught, in the diocese of Kilmore. Ecclesiastical Divisions.

Provinces and Dioceses.

The ecclesiastical Province of Dublin was wholly contained in the Province of Leinster, encroached upon, as stated above, by the Province of Armagh, and also by that of Cashel, which includes a portion of the King's County, belonging to the diocese of Killaloe. The Province of Cashel embraced the whole of Munster, and in addition that part of Leinster already referred to. The Province of Tuam included the entire of the civil Province of Connaught, with the exception of the portion of the County of Leitrim belonging to the diocese of Kilmore and Province of Armagh, as already stated.

In the year 1834 the ecclesiastical division into provinces and dioceses was substantially the same for the Established as for the Roman Catholic Church, except that in the latter the small diocese of Kilfenora, comprising a portion of the County of Clare, was included in the Province of Tuam, instead of belonging (as in the Established Church) to the Province of Cashel.

Armagh.

The Province of Armagh (Established Church) in the year 1834, consisted of the following dioceses, which we state in the order assigned to them in the Tables of the Commissioners of Public Instruction:—Clogher, Kilmore, Ardagh, Meath, Armagh, Dromore, Down, Connor, Derry, and Raphoe. The Roman Catholic province was similarly constituted.

Dublin.

The Province of Dublin (Established Church) contained the following dioceses:—Kildare, Leighlin, Ferns, Dublin, and Ossory; and the Roman Catholic province was similarly constituted. The ancient diocese of Glendalough was not enumerated by the Commissioners of Public Instruction in 1834.

Cashel.

The dioceses included in the Province of Cashel (Established Church), were the following:—Waterford, Lismore, Cashel, Emly, Cloyne, Cork, Ross, Ardfert and Aghadoe, Limerick, Killaloe, and Kilfenora. The Roman Catholic dioceses in that metropolitan See were ten in number, the first seven, together with Limerick and Killaloe, having the same designation as in the Established Church, Ardfert and Aghadoe being comprised in the diocese of Kerry; and the diocese of Kilfenora being annexed to the Province of Tuam.

Tuam.

The (Established Church) Province of Tuam, contained the dioceses of Kilmacduagh, Clonfert, Elphin, Tuam, Killala, and Achonry. The Roman Catholic province, in addition to the foregoing, included the diocese of Kilfenora, in the County of Clare.

In the year 1834, as now, according to the discipline of both churches, two or more dioceses were, in several instances, under the pastoral jurisdiction of the same bishop.

In the year 1833, under the provisions of the 3 and 4 William IV., cap. 37, the Established Church in the Province of Tuam was prospectively annexed to that of Armagh, and the Province of Cashel to that of Dublin, and the actual annexations took place upon the avoidance of the archiepiscopal Sees of Tuam and of Cashel respectively some years later. Pursuant to the provisions of the same Act, the number of archbishops and bishops of the Established Church was reduced prospectively from its then existing number to twelve, which is their present number. The number and boundaries of the several dioceses, however, remained unaltered, although the province of Dublin now includes not only the whole of the former province of Cashel, but also the dioceses of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh belonging to the former province of Tuam.

The Roman Catholic division into provinces and dioceses has remained unaltered up to the present time, except in so far as the exempt jurisdiction or wardenate of Galway has been changed into a diocese.

Territorial extent of Dioceses.

A Census having been taken in 1834 according to the ecclesiastical divisions only of the country, it became obviously necessary, with a view to comparison, that the religious statistics of the present Census should be tabulated in the same way as far as possible. For this purpose, the diocese was the only one of the ecclesiastical divisions entirely available, as not having undergone any change of boundary since 1834; whereas, the ancient ecclesiastical provinces had been reduced in number, and otherwise altered, as already described; and the subdivision of dioceses into benefices adopted in 1834, did not exactly correspond with the division into parishes, as followed in 1861. The following Table gives by counties, or portions of counties, the territory belonging to each diocese in 1861, with the population of those constituent parts and of the whole diocese, according to the distribution of religions adopted in 1834, namely, Established Church, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and "Other Protestant Dissenters." Some of the information contained in the Tables from I. to VII. has been anticipated in several returns which we have furnished from time to time, in obedience to Orders of the House of Commons; but it appears in a more detailed form, and in combination with other particulars, in the Tables referred to.

Table VI., on pages 30 and 31, gives for each diocese the total population, in 1861, together with the number of inhabitants belonging to each of seven classes, viz.:—Established Church, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists, Society of Friends, Jews, and to "All other Persuasions." It also gives the total population of each diocese in 1834, and the number of its inhabitants belonging to the three principal denominations of Established Church, Roman Catholics, and Presbyterians, and those who, in 1834, were classed as Protestant Dissenters, and may be presumed to have comprised Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and Quakers, together with those who, in the present Census, are grouped as "All other Persuasions."

Comparative Number of each Religious Profession in the years 1834 and 1861.

From that Table it appears that the distribution of the people of Ireland according to religion in the years 1834 and 1861 respectively was the following:—

	Established Church.		Roman Catholics.		Presbyterians.		Other Protestant Dissenters.		Total.
	1834.	1861.	1834.	1861.	1834.	1861.	1834.	1861.	1834.	1861.

Rate per cent.	18·7		30·0		18·7		251·3		27·1

By this we perceive that in twenty-seven years the Roman Catholic population has fallen off by as many as 1,930,795, or 30 per cent., and the Protestant by 224,731, or 14·8 per cent.

Ecclesiastical Divisions.

Comparative Number of Members of the Established Church in the years 1834 and 1861 in each Diocese.

Analysing the results of Table VI., as regards the Established Church, it is found, that between the years 1834 and 1861 its numbers declined from 853,160 to 693,357, showing a loss of 159,803, or rather under a fifth of their number in 1834. This loss must be divided amongst 27 out of the 32 dioceses, the number adhering to the Establishment having diminished in each of 27, and increased in the five dioceses of Connor, Down, Dromore, Emly, and Kilfenora. The entire Episcopalian Protestant population of the 27 dioceses in which their numbers have declined since 1834 was in that year 715,029, and in 1861, 538,225, showing a diminution of 176,804, or 25 per cent. of their original number. The heaviest loss was in the diocese of Clogher, in which the Church of England Protestants have been reduced from 104,359 to 65,195, exhibiting a loss of 39,164, or something more than a third of the former number. In 1834, the diocese of Clogher, as regards the number of members of the Established Church, came next in order after Dublin; it now ranks fourth, being preceded by Dublin, Armagh, and Connor. In the diocese of Armagh the number of Episcopalian Protestants fell between the years 1834 and 1861 from 103,012 to 85,583, showing a loss of 17,429 persons, or about one-sixth of the original number. In the diocese of Kilmore the numbers have been reduced from 46,879 to 31,646, showing a decline of 15,233, or little short of one-third of its Episcopalian population. In the diocese of Raphoe, the loss amounts to 11,294, or rather more than a third of the 33,507 Episcopalian Protestant inhabitants in 1834.

In very many of the twenty-seven dioceses the members of the Established Church may be said to have lost about a third of their numbers as they stood in 1834. In some, however, as in the dioceses of Waterford, Achonry, and Killala, it is considerably more than a third; while in those of Clonfert and Ferns, the decline approaches to one-half: the numbers in communion with the Established Church having been reduced in the former from 4,761 to 2,521; and in the latter from 24,672 to 14,383. The smallest absolute loss experienced by the Established Church was in the diocese of Kilmacduagh, 222—a number, however, which exceeds the third of what had been the Episcopalian population in 1834.

Out of the five dioceses which show an increase in the population professing the Established religion, the diocese of Connor, containing the great town of Belfast, is that in which the increase of this section of the people has been largest,—the number of Episcopalian Protestants having risen in the interval between 1834 and 1861, from 66,888 to 80,125, showing an increase of 13,237, or somewhat less than a fifth of the number in 1834, and the total Protestant population of all denominations having increased from 266,073 to 282,773. The next in the order of increase is the diocese of Dromore, in which the number of members of the Established Church has risen between 1834 and 1861, from 41,737 to 44,474, showing a gain of 2,737, or a fifteenth of the previous number. The increase from 28,025 to 28,868 in the diocese of Down, which gives 843 persons to the communion of the Established Church beyond the number in 1834, is relatively the smallest in any of the five dioceses,—being equivalent to no more than a thirty-third of the former population. The increase of Episcopalian Protestants, in the diocese of Emly, from 1,246 in 1834, to 1,414 in 1861, a gain of 168, is relatively greater than the increase in the diocese of Down, and represents more than an eighth of the former population. The same may be said of the diocese of Kilfenora, in which—while the absolute gain to the Established Church is only 16 (the difference between 235 persons in 1834, and 251 in 1861)—the increase is relatively as great as that in the diocese of Dromore—being about one-fifteenth of the former Episcopalian population.

Members of Established Church in each Diocese in 1834 and 1861.

The diocese of Dublin is that which contains the largest number of Protestants, 100,267, in communion with the Established Church; the diocese of Armagh follows, with 85,583; that of Connor takes the third place, with 80,125; and the diocese of Clogher comes fourth, with 65,195. The diocese of Kilfenora is that which contains fewest members of the Established Church, 251; and the adjoining diocese of Kilmacduagh ranks second in this respect, containing no more than 434. These two dioceses, it should be observed, are the two least populous in Ireland,—the former containing only 23,042, and the latter but 24,798 inhabitants. They are also those in which the proportion of Established Church Protestants was lowest in 1861—1·1 per cent. in Kilfenora, and 1·8 per cent. in Kilmacduagh. See analysis of Table VII. upon page 33.

In none of the thirty-two dioceses are the members of the Established Church equal in number to the Roman Catholics. In the four dioceses of Connor, Derry, Down, and Dromore, the Established Church Protestants are outnumbered by the Presbyterians, but in all the other dioceses they are in the majority over these latter. In one diocese, that of Dublin, the number of Established Church Protestants exceeds 100,000 and is under 101,000. In two, those of Armagh and Connor, it exceeds 80,000 and is under 86,000. In one, Clogher, it exceeds 65,000 and is under 66,000. In two, Derry and Dromore, it exceeds 43,000 and is under 45,000. In one, Kilmore, it exceeds 31,000 and is under 32,000. In two, Cork and Down, it exceeds 26,000 and is under 29,000. In one, Raphoe, it exceeds 22,000 and is under 23,000. In eight, Ardagh, Cloyne, Elphin, Ferns, Kildare, Killaloe, Leighlin, and Meath, it exceeds 10,000 and is under 17,000. In four, Ardfert and Aghadoe, Limerick, Ossory, and Tuam, it exceeds 5,000 and is under 10,000. In seven, Achonry, Cashel, Clonfert, Killala, Lismore, Ross, and Waterford, it exceeds 2,000 and is under 5,000; and in three, Emly, Kilfenora, and Kilmacduagh, it exceeds 200 and does not exceed 1,500.

Comparative Number of Roman Catholics in 1834 and 1861 in each Diocese.

Between the years 1834 and 1861, the Roman Catholic population shows a decline of 1,930,795 persons—the difference between 6,436,060 in 1834, and 4,505,265 in 1861—or nearly a third of what was their entire number in 1834; and distributing this loss over the dioceses, as in the case of the Established Church, we find that it has to be divided amongst thirty out of the thirty-two, the only exceptions being the dioceses of Dublin and Connor, in both of which the number of Roman Catholics is something in excess of what it was in 1834. The total Roman Catholic population of the thirty dioceses, in which it is found to have declined, was 5,949,509 in 1834, and 4,005,104 in 1861; showing, for the thirty dioceses, a loss of 1,944,405, or nearly a third of the former population. The dioceses in which the Roman Catholic population appears to have been most reduced, were those of Tuam, Killaloe, Meath, Elphin, and Cloyne. In the first-named diocese the number of Roman Catholics has been reduced from 467,970 to 302,367, exhibiting a loss of 165,603, or considerably more than a third of the former number. In 1834 the diocese of Tuam ranked third in respect of its total population, being preceded by Dublin and Armagh, and contained the largest number of Roman Catholics. In 1861 it had dropped to the fourth rank of total population—the order in that year having been Dublin, Armagh, Connor, Tuam; and as regards the absolute numbers of its Roman Catholic population, Tuam now occupies the second place. In the dioceses of Killaloe, Meath, Cloyne, and Elphin, respectively, the loss of Roman Catholic population was 148,487, 142,426, 126,108, and 120,253; being in each instance considerably more than a third. The diocese which suffered least was that of Achonry, the difference between its Roman Catholic population in 1834 and that in 1861 being only 3,632, or a thirtieth of that in 1834 (108,835). The diocese in which the loss of Roman Catholic population was least after Achonry, is that of Waterford, the absolute diminution having been 3,899, the difference between 43,371 in 1834, and 39,472 in 1861. The loss, relatively, to the numbers of the Roman Catholic population in the diocese of Waterford, was, however, much more considerable than that in the diocese of Achonry, having been about one-eleventh in the former, and not more than a thirtieth in the latter.

Ecclesiastical Divisions.

Roman Catholics in 1834 and 1861 in each Diocese.

The two dioceses which exhibit an increase in the number of their Roman Catholic population are those of Dublin and Connor, as already stated. In the year 1834, the Roman Catholic population of the diocese of Dublin was 391,006; in 1861 it amounted to 396,916, showing an increase of 5,910, or 1·5 per cent. of that in 1834. In the diocese of Connor, containing, as already mentioned, the town of Belfast, the increase in the Roman Catholic population is more considerable, both absolutely and relatively. In 1834 the Roman Catholic inhabitants of that diocese amounted to 95,545, and in 1861, to 103,245, showing a difference of 7,700, or 8 per cent. in favour of 1861. The united Roman Catholic population of the two dioceses of Dublin and Connor, was 486,551 in 1834, and 500,161 in 1861, showing an increase of 13,610, or 2·8 per cent. of the population between 1834 and 1861.

The absolute number of Roman Catholics is greatest in the diocese of Dublin, 396,916. Tuam follows, with 302,367; and in the remaining dioceses, it ranges between 235,136 in Meath, and 22,789 in Kilfenora. In two dioceses, Tuam and Dublin, the Roman Catholic population exceeds 300,000 and is under 397,000. In six, Ardfert, Armagh, Cloyne, Cork, Killaloe, and Meath, it exceeds 200,000 and does not exceed 236,000. In fourteen, Achonry, Ardagh, Cashel, Clogher, Connor, Derry, Elphin, Ferns, Kilmore, Leighlin, Limerick, Lismore, Ossory, and Raphoe, it exceeds 100,000 and is under 190,000. In six, Clonfert, Dromore, Emly, Kildare, Killala, and Ross, it exceeds 50,000, and is under 85,000. And in four, Down, Kilfenora, Kilmacduagh, and Waterford, it exceeds 22,000 and is under 47,000.

In each of the thirty-two dioceses the Roman Catholics are in a majority, as regards the members of the Established Church, and in twenty-nine, as regards the Protestant population generally. In the dioceses of Connor and Down they are in a minority as regards the Presbyterians. In the diocese of Dromore, although the largest section of the population, they are outnumbered by the other sections united.

Comparative Number of Presbyterians for each Diocese in 1834 and 1861.

In the year 1834 the number of Presbyterians in Ireland was returned as 643,058, and in 1861 it had fallen to 523,291, exhibiting a reduction of 119,767, or rather less than a fifth of their number in 1834. This reduction distributes itself over ten of the thirty-two dioceses—those, namely, of Achonry, Armagh, Clogher, Connor, Derry, Down, Dromore, Kilfenora, Kilmore, and Raphoe, the total Presbyterian population of which amounted in 1834 to 637,784, and in 1861 to 505,196, showing a reduction of 132,588, or 20·8 per cent. of the original numbers. The greatest absolute loss of Presbyterian population was in the diocese of Derry, where it declined between 1834 and 1861 from 118,339 to 79,287, and shows a reduction of 39,052, or nearly a third of the former population. Next in amount is that in the diocese of Armagh, where, in the interval with which we have been dealing, it underwent a reduction from 84,848 to 57,556; the difference—27,292—representing somewhat less than a third of the larger. In the diocese of Down, the reduction next in amount, 15,803 being the difference between 99,652 and 83,849, is not relatively so great as that in Armagh, and represents somewhat more than a seventh of the former population. In the dioceses of Clogher, Kilmore, and Raphoe, the decrease is considerably more than a third of the population of 1834. In the diocese of Dromore the diminution of the Presbyterians is about a fifth. In the diocese of Connor the actual loss, 8,931, although considerable in itself, is small as compared with that in other dioceses, being only 4·6 per cent. of the population in 1834. As regards the two remaining dioceses the diminution is 5 per cent. in Achonry, and the total diminution in Kilfenora, 3. In the former it is relatively trifling, being a twenty-eighth of the population, 143, in 1834; while in the latter it is relatively great, being three-fourths of the population in 1834.

In twenty-two dioceses the Presbyterians have very considerably increased, their gross population having been only 5,274 in 1834, and 18,095 in 1861, showing an increase of 243·1 per cent.

In 1834 the dioceses of Ardfert, Kilmacduagh, and Ross, had no Presbyterian inhabitants. The first-named of these had, in 1861, 259, the second 23, and the last 76. In 1834 the diocese of Emly had but one Presbyterian inhabitant, and in 1861 had 49; while from the diocese of Clonfert, which in 1834 possessed only two Presbyterian inhabitants, 256 were returned in 1861. The absolute increase is largest in the dioceses of Dublin and Cork, in the former of which the Presbyterian body has risen from 2,290 in 1834, to 8,165 in 1861, showing an increase of 5,875, or more than double its previous number; and in the latter from 510 to 1,229, showing an increase of 719, or nearly one and a-half the number in 1834. In the remaining dioceses the numbers of the Presbyterians, although very fractional, as compared with those of the Roman Catholics or members of the Established Church, all show a great increase relatively to the number of Presbyterians inhabiting those places in 1834.

The Presbyterians have an absolute though small majority in the diocese of Down. In the diocese of Connor they are the largest section of the population, but fewer than the members of the other religions conjointly. In the dioceses of Derry and Dromore they are fewer than the Roman Catholics, but more numerous than the members of the Established Church; and in the remaining dioceses they are in the minority, both as regards Roman Catholics and Episcopalian Protestants.

In one diocese, that of Connor, the Presbyterians exceed 184,000 and are under 185,000. In two, Derry and Down, they exceed 79,000 and are under 84,000. In two, Dromore and Armagh, they exceed 55,000 and are under 58,000. In two, Raphoe and Clogher, they exceed 17,000 and are under 22,000. In two, Kilmore and Dublin, they exceed 5,000 and are under 9,000. In two, Meath and Cork, they exceed 1,000 and are under 1,300. In seven, Ardagh, Cloyne, Elphin, Kildare, Killala, Limerick, and Tuam, they exceed 500 and are under 1,000. In each of ten, Achonry, Ardfert, Cashel, Clonfert, Ferns, Killaloe, Leighlin, Lismore, Ossory, and Waterford, they exceed 100 and are under 500. In three, Emly, Kilmacduagh, and Ross, they exceed 20 and are under 100; and in the diocese of Kilfenora there was but one Presbyterian in 1861.

Comparative Number of "Other Protestant Dissenters"

The four religious bodies—viz., Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and Quakers, having separate columns in the Tables of the present Census, were grouped in the Census of 1834 under the head of "Other Protestant Dissenters," along with those now included in one column for "All other Persuasions;" and although their numbers show a very general increase throughout Ireland, they are, nevertheless, with few exceptions, so fractional in individual

According to this Table it will be seen that the proportion of Protestants to the population in 1834 was 19·1 in every 100 persons, and in 1861 it was 22·3; whilst the Roman Catholics formed 80·9 per cent. of the population in 1834; and 77·7 in 1861.

Percentage of Members of the Established Church for each Diocese in 1834 and 1861.

The proportion per cent. of the members of the Established Church to the general population has risen since 1834 in twenty-one out of the thirty-two dioceses, has remained stationary in two, and fallen in nine. The increase in the percentage of Established Church Protestants was largest in the diocese of Dromore, where the increase amounted to 3·6, the diocese of Down followed with 2·8, that of Kildare with 2·4, and that of Connor with 2·3; in none of the remaining seventeen did it amount to 2·0. The dioceses in which the proportion of members of the Established Church remained stationary are Clonfert with 3·9, and Killala with 5·4 per cent. Out of the nine dioceses in which the proportion has fallen, the greatest decline (4·0) was exhibited by the diocese of Waterford. In those of Raphoe and Ferns the decline was 3·1 and 3·0 respectively; in that of Dublin, 1·8; in Achonry, 1·6; in Clogher, 1·3; and in Kilmore and Leighlin it was under 1.

In one diocese, that of Dromore, the percentage of members of the Established Church in 1861 exceeded 25 and was under 26. In three dioceses, Armagh, Connor, and Clogher, it exceeded 20 and was under 25. In eight, Cork, Derry, Down, Dublin, Kildare, Kilmore, Leighlin, and Raphoe, it exceeded 10 and was under 20; in ten, Ardagh, Cloyne, Elphin, Ferns, Killala, Killaloe, Meath, Ossory, Ross, and Waterford, it exceeded 5 and was under 10; in eight, Achonry, Ardfert, Cashel, Clonfert, Emly, Limerick, Lismore, and Tuam, it exceeded 2 and did not exceed 5; and in two, Kilfenora and Kilmacduagh, it exceeded 1 and was under 2.

The proportion of Roman Catholics to the population at large has risen in the following dioceses:—Achonry, Connor, Derry, Ferns, Raphoe, and Waterford. The increase of proportion was largest in Raphoe, where it amounted to 5·1; Waterford followed with 2·6,

Ecclesiastical Divisions.

Percentage of Roman Catholics for each Diocese.

Derry with 2·5, Ferns with 2·2, and Achonry with 1·6 of an increase. In the diocese of Connor the increase was under 1. The proportion has declined in the remaining twenty-six dioceses, the decrease being greatest (3·4) in the diocese of Kildare, followed by Cork with 2·8, Down with 2·5, Ross with 2·4, Dromore with 2·1, Cloyne with 1·9, Limerick with 1·6, Tuam with 1·3, and by Emly, Killala, and Killaloe with 1·1 each. In the remaining dioceses the decline was not more than 1.

In nine dioceses, Achonry, Ardfert, Cashel, Clonfert, Emly, Kilfenora, Kilmacduagh, Lismore, and Tuam, the Roman Catholic population exceeded 95 and was under 99 per cent.; in ten, Ardagh, Cloyne, Elphin, Killala, Killaloe, Limerick, Meath, Ossory, Ross, and Waterford, it exceeded 90 and was under 95 per cent.; in four, Cork, Ferns, Kildare, and Leighlin, it exceeded 85 and was under 90 per cent.; in one, Kilmore, it exceeded 80 and was under 85 per cent.; in two, Raphoe and Dublin it exceeded 75 and was under 78 per cent.; in two, Armagh and Clogher, it exceeded 60 and was under 66 per cent; in one, Derry, it exceeded 56 and was under 57 per cent.; and in three, Connor, Down, and Dromore, it exceeded 26 and was under 39 per cent.

Percentage of Presbyterians for each Diocese.

The proportion of Presbyterians to the general population has risen in twenty-two out of the thirty-two dioceses, and has fallen in the remaining ten. In one diocese only, that of Dublin, does the advance in the percentage amount to 1, and there it is 1·1, having increased since 1834 from 0·5 to 1·6. The dioceses in which the percentage of Presbyterians has declined, all belong, with the exception of Achonry and Kilfenora, to the Ecclesiastical province of Ulster, the chief seat of the Presbyterian religion in Ireland. The diocese of Connor is that in which the proportion of the Presbyterian population has most sensibly diminished, and is shown to have fallen from 53·5, or more than a moiety of the total population in 1834, to 47·8, exhibiting a loss of 5·7. The diocese of Derry comes next in this respect, the percentage of the Presbyterian population having there fallen from 32·2 to 27·0, showing a loss of 5·2. The Presbyterian population of the diocese of Dromore has suffered in the third degree, from the lowering of its percentage, which is found to have sunk from 36·8 to 32·4, and thus shows a loss of 4·4. Raphoe shows the next most considerable fall in the percentage of the Presbyterian population, which has there dropped since 1834 from 13·9 to 10·4, being thus diminished by 3·5. In Armagh diocese the loss is 2, the difference between 16·9 and 14·9; and in the diocese of Down 1·4, the difference between 52·6 in 1834, and 51·2 in 1861; in the dioceses of Kilmore and Achonry the loss is under 1.

In the diocese of Down, the Presbyterians exceeded 51 and were under 52 per cent.; in Connor, they exceeded 47 and were under 48 per cent.; in Dromore, they exceeded 32 and were under 33 per cent.; in the diocese of Derry they were 27 per cent.; in two dioceses, Raphoe and Armagh, they exceeded 10 and were under 15 per cent.; in Clogher, they exceeded 8 and were under 9 per cent.; in Kilmore, they exceeded 2 and were under 3 per cent.; in Dublin, they exceeded 1 and were under 2 per cent.; in the remaining twenty-three dioceses their percentage was under 1.

Percentage of "Other Protestant Dissenters" in each diocese.

The group included under the head of "Other Protestant Dissenters," and comprising Methodists, Independents, Baptists, Society of Friends, and All other Persuasions, although forming only a small section of the population, has increased its percentage since the year 1834, from 0·3 to 1·4. This increase is due, in a very large measure, to the fact already noticed at page 5 of this Report, that in 1834 Wesleyan Methodists were enumerated as belonging to the Established Church, whereas, in the present Census they have been classed under a distinct head. If the considerable number of 45,399 Wesleyan Methodists were now to be deducted from the total of "Other Protestant Dissenters" (76,661), the increase in the percentage would be only 0·2; while, if the Wesleyan Methodists were now to be counted in with the members of the Established Church, the increase in the ratio of population, between 1834 and 1861, in communion with the latter body, would be raised from 1·2 to 2·0 per cent. In 1834 the ratio of "Other Protestant Dissenters" nowhere amounted to 2·0, and in two dioceses only, those of Connor and Down, did it exceed or amount to 1·0. In 1861 the percentage of "Other Protestant Dissenters" had risen from 1·7 to 4·7 in the diocese of Connor, from 0·5 to 3·4 in the diocese of Dromore, from 1·8 to 2·9 in the diocese of Down, from 0·7 to 2·1 in the diocese of Armagh, from ·0 to 2·0 in Clogher diocese, from 0·5 to 2·0 in Derry, from 0·2 to 1·8 in Cork, from 0·9 to 1·8 in Waterford, from 0·4 to 1·6 in Dublin, from ·0 to 1·5 in Raphoe, and from 0·1 to 1·3 in Kilmore. In the remaining dioceses the increase has been under 1.

Percentage of each Religious Profession in 1834 and 1861.

Upon the whole, the percentage of members of the Established Church has been increased from 10·7 in 1834 to 11·9 in 1861, an advance of 1·2; the proportion of Roman Catholics has receded from 80·9 in 1834 to 77·7 in 1861, a decline of 3·2; the proportion of Presbyterians has advanced from 8·1 in 1834 to 9·0 in 1861, an increase of 0·9; "All other Protestant Dissenters" show an increase from 0·3 to 1·4, or an advance of 1·1 since 1834; and the Protestant population generally an increase from 19·1 to 22·3, or 3·2.

The only analysis of this Table into which it seems necessary to enter is furnished by the total, according to which it appears that the Methodists formed 0·8; the Independents, Baptists, and Quakers, 0·1 each; and "All other Persuasions," 0·3 per cent. of the population of Ireland at the time of taking the Census in 1861.

The Commissioners, in 1834, classified as above the 1,387 benefices of the Established Church in Ireland according to the number of residents belonging to that Church in each benefice. The same classification by parishes is now adopted, not merely in respect of the Episcopalian Protestant residents, but of the three principal denominations separately, and of all others in bulk. As, however, the "parish" is far from being identical with the "benefice" (the latter sometimes including more than one, and occasionally only part of a parish), it is obvious that no accurate comparison could be instituted between the statistics of the benefices in 1834 and those of the parishes in 1861, even had the boundaries of parishes themselves undergone no alteration in the interval, which is not the case. In illustration of the difference between the area of the benefice and of the parish, it may be stated, that whereas in the year 1834 the number of benefices was only 1,387, the number of parishes was 2,395, not differing materially from the number of parishes in 1861—2,428. Nor, even were we to travel out of the Census returns, would we be afforded the means of making a comparison between the population of benefices in the years 1834 and 1861, inasmuch as the composition and extent of benefices have undergone much greater changes, under various enabling Acts, than have the boundaries of parishes.

While, therefore, it has been thought right to give the Table of Benefices, extracted from the Report of the Commissioners of 1834, as containing facts proper to be borne in mind, although not available for purposes of close or reliable comparison, Table IX., on the following page, has been framed, according to parishes, not less for the purpose of communicating the facts which it embodies, than for the advantage of future comparison. It shows the parishes of Ireland, classified according to the number of members of the Established Church, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, and other Protestant Dissenters, resident in each, in the years 1834 and 1861, respectively.

Although there were 33 more parishes in 1861 than had been in 1834, the increase is too trifling to affect materially the comparison afforded by Table IX., between the distribution of the several religions at these two periods. The increase is due chiefly to the formation of new parishes out of townlands detached from parishes previously existing, or to the division of ancient parishes, as already stated in our Report on Ages and Education. In the one case it may have lessened the number of parishes having fewest members of the Established Church; and in the other, reduced the number of the more populous parishes by these divisions; but in either case the alteration in the size and grouping of the parishes, spread over the entire number, must be inconsiderable.

Classification of Parishes as to Established Church population.

From this Table it appears that of the seven classes of parishes, from V. to XI., both inclusively, which in 1834 contained the largest number of members of the Established Church, six have undergone a large reduction, and one (XI.) has disappeared; while class XII., or those having more than 20,000, and not more than 30,000, which was unrepresented in 1834, is now represented by two. The class of parishes having no resident member of the Established Church shows a reduction of five, the difference between 204 in 1834 and 199 in 1861. On the other hand the three groups of parishes containing fewest Episcopalian Protestants have undergone a considerable increase. This may be accounted for in some degree by the fact that the parishes containing the largest proportion of Episcopalian Protestants contained also the greatest proportion of poor and struggling members of that persuasion, upon whom the calamitous events of the famine period, and other periods of distress during the twenty-seven years interval between 1834 and 1861, may be supposed to have pressed with equal severity as upon their poor countrymen of other persuasions. The Established Church population being thus reduced in the parishes where it was most dense, those parishes dropped from the rank assignable to them in 1834 into the lower ranks of the scale; while the parishes in which the members of the Established Church were in better circumstances, and were placed by their social position comparatively beyond the influence of the disastrous times to which we have referred, have not been exposed to a like reduction in the number of Established Church residents; and the number of those parishes became increased by the disappearance from other parishes higher in the scale of the few members of the Established Church who were unable to hold their ground against the pressure of the day.

Members of the Established Church in each Parish.

Confining our attention now to the year 1861, we find that there were 199 parishes in 1861, containing no member of the Established Church, and consequently that the number of parishes having resident members of that church was 2,229. Of this number the parishes which constituted the largest group were those in which the members of the Established Church did not exceed 20, the number of such parishes being 575, or nearly a fourth of the entire. The two largest groups next in succession were those parishes which contained no more than 50 and 100 members respectively of the Established Church; and adding together these three groups, the number of parishes in which the members of the Established Church did not exceed 100, will be found to be 1,340, or more than one-half the entire number of parishes having members of the Established Church. Next in point of numbers is the group of parishes in which the members of the Established Church ranged between 200 and 500; the number of which was 309, or something more than one-eighth of the whole. The next most considerable group (270) of parishes containing Established Church Protestants was that in which the number did not exceed 200. The three groups in which the members of the Established Church did not exceed 1,000, 2,000, and 5,000, respectively, diminish progressively and pretty uniformly in numbers, being 141, 106, and 53; while the groups in which they exceeded 5,000, count only 10, being a small fraction of the entire number. Two parishes, those, namely, of St. Peter, in the county and city of Dublin, and diocese of Dublin, and of Shankill, in the county of Antrim, and diocese of Connor, which had between 10,000 and 20,000 Episcopalian Protestants in 1834, have disappeared from that class, and are now found in the higher class having between 20,000 and 30,000. PAROCHIAL POPULATION.

As regards Roman Catholics, there was no parish in 1861 in which there was not a member of the Roman Catholic religion. The number of parishes in which Roman Catholics did not exceed 20 was then eight; that in which they were between 20 and 50, twenty-nine; and that in which they were between 50 and 100, sixty. Summing the numbers in these three, they amount to 97, or one twenty-fifth, as nearly as possible, of the entire number of parishes in Ireland; those groups being the smallest in which the Roman Catholic population was least. The number in each group increases from the first to the eighth inclusively—the eighth, or that to which belong parishes containing between 1,000 and 2,000 Roman Catholics, being the most numerous. The ninth group, containing those parishes, the Roman Catholic inhabitants of which were between 2,000 and 5,000, is smaller than the preceding, but larger than any of the others. The number of parishes, the Roman Catholic inhabitants of which exceeded 5,000, is 170. The sum of the three groups of parishes in which the Roman Catholic population ranged between 100 and 1,000 is 1,056, or more than two-fifths the entire number; while the sum of the groups in which parishes the Roman Catholics exceeded 1,000 is 1,275, or somewhat more than half the number of parishes in Ireland. The six groups of parishes in which the number of Roman Catholic inhabitants was smallest in 1834, have each increased, owing, of course, to the depression of parishes from the higher steps in the scale of population. Four of the groups having the largest number of Roman Catholic inhabitants, (those between the limits of 1,000 and 20,000) have decreased since 1834;—the group between the limits of 20,000 and 30,000 remains stationary at three; and two groups, that between 30,000 and 40,000, and that exceeding 40,000, which were not represented in 1834, were each represented by one for 1861. Classification of Parishes as to Roman Catholic population.

The group of parishes (1,261) in which there was no Presbyterian population in 1861, was he largest in relation to that body, being only 14 short of the number of those in which the Roman Catholics exceeded 1,000, and more than six times the number of parishes in which there were no members of the Established Church. Deducting the number of parishes in which there were no Presbyterians from the total of parishes in Ireland, we have 1,167, or less than half, containing a Presbyterian population. Of this last number, 688, or more than half, contained from 1 to 20 Presbyterian residents. The next most numerous class, 94, of what, for shortness, may be called Presbyterian parishes, is that in which the Presbyterian population ranged between 20 and 50. Parishes having a population of from 1,000 to 2,000 Presbyterians form the third most numerous class, 92. Next is that in which the several parishes (63) have between 500 and 1,000. Fifth in order are the parishes having between 2,000 and 5,000 Presbyterians, numbering 56, and consequently more numerous by three than the corresponding group of parishes in relation to the Established Church. The class of parishes containing more than 5,000 Presbyterians amounted to 16, and is therefore six in excess of the corresponding class as regards the Established Church. Large, however, as is the number of parishes having no Presbyterian inhabitants, it is very much smaller than the number of parishes so circumstanced in 1834,—the amount in that year having been 1,884, whereas in 1861 it was no more than 1,261. The seven classes of parishes in which Presbyterians were fewest, ending with the limit of 2,000, have all increased considerably, while two of the classes in which they were most numerous, those between the limits of 2,000 and 10,000, have largely diminished. In 1861, as in 1834, there was one parish with between 10,000 and 20,000 Presbyterian inhabitants. In 1834 there was one parish with between 20,000 and 30,000 Presbyterian residents; there was no such parish in 1861, but there is one parish in which the Presbyterian inhabitants exceed 40,000—viz, that of Shankill, in the diocese of Connor, and county of Antrim, remarkable as having the largest number of parishioners of the Established, Roman Catholic, and Presbyterian Churches respectively, and as being the most populous in Ireland. Classification of Parishes as to Presbyterian population.

The number of parishes in 1861 in which there were no members of "Other Protestant Persuasions" amounted to 1,386, or much more than half the total number of parishes in Ireland; leaving 1,042 parishes in which there existed some residents of other than the three foregoing religious denominations. Of the last-mentioned number, 606, or much more than a half, did not contain more than 20 members of "Other Protestant Persuasions;" and according as the number of residents increases, the number of parishes in the other groups diminishes, as far as the group "more than 2,000 and not more than 5,000;" of which class there was no parish containing "Other Protestant Dissenters." The Classification of Parishes as to "Other Protestant Persuasions."

PAROCHIAL POPULATION.

number of parishes having no resident Protestant Dissenters other than Presbyterians, like the number of parishes having no Presbyterian inhabitants, has been greatly reduced since 1834; and all the remaining groups of parishes, classified according to their population of "Other Protestant Dissenters," have increased, so far as the eighth group, inclusively—that in which the limit is 2,000. The ninth group is not represented, but there was one parish, that of Shankill, already referred to, which had more than 5,000, and not more than 10,000 Protestant Dissenters, other than Presbyterians.

DECREASE OF POPULATION.

Decrease of the Members of the different Religious Professions, consequent on the Potato failure.

Having completed our analysis of the numbers of the population adhering to the several forms of religion existing in Ireland, we might possibly be expected to account in some way for the different degrees in which the numerical strength of at least the principal religious denominations has been affected by the influence of the famine period, so often referred to in the present Census publications, as well as in those of 1851. The two principal denominations—Roman Catholic and Protestant—contained each a certain proportion of the struggling, of the poor, and of the destitute, as well as of those who, not ranging under any of the above heads, were yet so dependent upon the general prosperity of the country from the nature of their employment, or the precariousness of their resources, as to be unable to resist the pressure of so terrible a visitation as the failure of the potato. There can be no doubt whatever that that proportion of the classes just mentioned was smallest amongst the members of the Established Church, to which belong, in a greatly preponderating number, all those classes of society whose affluence, employments, and resources generally, would best qualify them to struggle successfully against the difficulties of the time. Relatively, therefore, to their number in 1834, the Protestants of the Established and Presbyterian churches and other minor denominations, have experienced a smaller reduction than the other great division of the population. The extent, nevertheless, to which their number has been reduced, affords a striking illustration of the universality, intensity, and duration of Irish distress, when it is considered that a section of the people so highly favoured beyond their countrymen in wealth, social position, and prosperity, should have contributed nearly a fifth of their number to the general loss. This fifth may be taken to represent those of their communion belonging to the class of the smaller farmers and agricultural labourers, together with the small shopkeepers and tradesmen whose business depends upon agricultural prosperity, and the other classes already referred to, as least able to contend against the general and deep distress.

It would be superfluous to refer to the tables of occupations for proof of the well-known fact that the Roman Catholic community, which forms the great majority of the population, contains by far the largest proportion of those classes, already noticed, upon whom general distress must come with special severity. Upon them, therefore, the potato failure and its attendant calamities told, as might have been anticipated, with more destructive effect than upon any other section of the people, reducing their numbers by something like a third; while the Presbyterians, who in respect to general and substantial comfort are not less well-circumstanced than the members of the Established Church, suffered in the same degree as the latter; thus making it apparent that these three principal divisions of the people experienced a reduction in their respective numbers corresponding with the degree in which they contained the classes least able to hold out against severe suffering or privations.

RELIGION AND EDUCATION.

Percentage of Persons who could neither Read nor Write.

The general statistics of education, so far as ascertainable from the Census Returns, having been already reported upon at some length, and with some particularity, in a preceding volume, it only remains to apply certain of those statistics to the professors of the several religions comprised in our Tables. And first, we beg to submit Table X., showing the proportion per cent. of the members of each denomination five years old and upwards, who could neither read nor write, at the date of taking the Census of 1861.

Taking up the totals of the following summary, we find that of the religious denominations named in the Table, the Society of Friends is that in which elementary instruction is most general, there having been only 4·1 per cent. of its members, five years old and upwards, returned as unable to read or write. The Independents come next, with 6·8 per cent.; the Methodists third, with 9·0 per cent.; the Baptists fourth, with 9·2 per cent.; the Presbyterians fifth, with 11·1 per cent.; those tabulated under the head of "All other Persuasions," sixth, with 11·8 per cent.; the Jews seventh, with 11·9 per cent.; the members of the Established Church eighth, with 16·0 per cent.; and the Roman Catholics ninth, with 45·8 per cent. The total Protestant population has 13·7 per cent. unable to read or write. The first general rule deducible from these figures seems to be that the elementary instruction becomes less diffused in proportion as the receiving body is more numerous. This rule is of course subject to many exceptions, as in the case where the laws of the country or the rules of any particular community apply special means to the promotion of elementary instruction, or wherever local circumstances, more powerful than laws or rules, may be adverse to its spread; but the general rule is well established by experience. The difference in favour of the members of the Established Church and the Protestant community generally, between the percentage of their ignorant and that of the ignorant amongst the Roman Catholics may be accounted for to a great extent by the social position of the two bodies, already adverted to in connexion with the subject of the reduction of their respective numbers. It is much more difficult to account, otherwise than through the general rule, for the manifest superiority over the Protestants of the Established Church which the lower percentage of ignorance among the Presbyterians exhibits. In social position the majority of Presbyterians may, perhaps, be classed rather with the majority of Roman Catholics than with the Protestants of the Established Church; while it is certain that in the number of landed proprietors, of persons in the public service, and of members of the learned professions, the Roman Catholics approach more nearly to the condition of the Established Church Protestants than do the Presbyterians; notwithstanding which circumstance the last-named body stands highest of the three in respect of the small percentage of its ignorant. In confirmation of this, it may be observed that the province of Ulster, in which the Protestants of all kinds are most numerous, is that in which the percentage of ignorant, in their several denominations, is highest, and is largely in excess of the percentage for the other provinces. In none of the provinces are the Roman Catholics, who form the majority in each, sufficiently few to found any argument upon their paucity; and the difference between the percentage of their ignorant in each province must therefore be ascribed to other causes. Leinster, with a Roman Catholic population more numerous than that of any other province with the exception of Munster, has the smallest percentage, 34·9, of Roman Catholic ignorant. Ulster, with a Roman Catholic population more numerous than that of Connaught, although relatively the smallest belonging to any of the provinces, has, next to Leinster, the smallest percentage of ignorant belonging to the Roman Catholic Church, 44·4. Munster, with the largest Roman Catholic population, has the percentage next in amount, 48·4; and Connaught shows the largest percentage, 59·4, of ignorant in connexion with that Church.

Percentage of Persons who could Read and Write, Read only, and who could neither Read nor Write.

Table XI., on the following page, shows for the three principal denominations, and for the remainder of the people here included under the head of "All other Persuasions," the proportion per cent. of the population 5 years old and upwards belonging to each class who could "read and write," "read only," and who could "neither read nor write."

The percentage of members of the Established Church returned as able to read and write is highest in the suburbs of the city of Dublin, where it reaches 89·1; it comes second in the city of Waterford, where it is 87·8; third in the county of Dublin (suburbs excluded), where it reaches 87·5; and fourth in the city of Dublin, where it is 87·1. Several local causes seem to be concerned in giving this distinction, as regards the diffusion of elementary instruction amongst Established Church Protestants, to each of the divisions of the metropolitan county. In the suburbs the smallness of the Protestant Episcopalian population,* as compared with that of the northern counties, or of the city of Dublin, and of some other places; the affluent, or, at least, easy circumstances of most of its members, who principally inhabit the villa residences and many numerous terraces of which these suburbs are so largely composed; the compactness of their numbers, and the easy access of the children to schools, all co-operate to favour the spread of elementary instruction amongst the class referred to in that locality. The same reasoning exactly, save as to density of population in some districts, will apply to the county of Dublin (suburbs excluded); and even where the Protestant population is less dense, it belongs almost exclusively to the higher classes, who are not affected by circumstances which would check the spread of instruction among the less affluent. In the city of Dublin, the spread of instruction amongst the members of the Established Church is due to some of the causes enumerated, and to the fact, that a great part of all the learning of the country is necessarily attracted to the metropolis as the seat of government, the university, the schools of medicine, the superior courts of law, and of the principal educational institutions;—thus making Dublin the Capital, literary and scientific, not less than political, of Ireland.

Percentage of Persons Educated and Uneducated.

As with the members of the Established Church so with the Roman Catholics: the greatest diffusion of elementary instruction is in the suburbs of Dublin, where 60·3 per cent. of those five years old and upwards, out of a population of 29,639 are returned as able to read and write. The city of Dublin comes next, with 58·7 out of a population of 196,549, and the county of the town of Carrickfergus follows, with 49·1 per cent. out of a population of 1,046. Of these percentages that, perhaps, of the city of Dublin is the most favourable, considering the largeness of the Roman Catholic population, and the immense proportion of it belonging to the classes of the indigent and even of the destitute. Many local circumstances, however, which favour the spread of instruction in the Capital amongst their fellow-countrymen of other religions, have obviously their effect upon the state of instruction amongst Roman Catholics, between whom and other religious bodies there seems to be a rivalry in advancing education which cannot but be profitable to the community. The highest percentage—of Presbyterians—"able to read and write" is in Galway town, where it amounts to 92·8 out of a population of 189. The percentage of those able to read and write is, in every county, except Meath and Roscommon, higher for the Presbyterian than for members of the Established Church. As regards the class of those who read only, there is a remarkable correspondence between the percentages of the Established and Roman Catholic Churches; the result for all Ireland being, in the former, 20·2, and in the latter, 19·1. In the Presbyterian body it is considerably higher,

* The district of Dublin suburbs ranks fourteenth in the scale of population, as regards the members of the Established Church.

28·8. As regards the state of elementary instruction amongst the three principal denominations in each province, as shown by actual or presumed ability to read and write, the provinces rank as follows:—For the Established Church—Leinster gives 82·9; Munster, 81·1; Connaught, 72·8; and Ulster, 50· per cent. For Roman Catholics—Leinster gives 43·4; Munster, 37·4; Ulster, 29·4; and Connaught, 25·5 per cent. For Presbyterians—Leinster gives 87·6; Munster, 87·5; Connaught, 83·3; and Ulster, 59·1 per cent.

Upon the whole, while regarding the ability to read and write, or to read only, ascribed to individuals in the Census Returns, as but an inadequate test of the diffusion of elementary instruction, it must be admitted, on the other hand, that the want of that power is a very sufficient indication of ignorance. It does not, however, follow that by reason of a greater or smaller percentage of ignorant persons in any locality, or among any religious community, the general standard of intellectual culture in such place or in such communion must be taken to conform to those percentages. If the proportion of ignorant appears unduly high, the circumstance, however much to be regretted, is certainly not ascribable to any want of liberality in the State, nor of intelligent zeal in private enterprise throughout all the religious communions, but must be set down to the account of local and temporary obstructions.

So many elements, beyond the diffusion of primary instruction, belong to the mental cultivation of a people, that we have endeavoured, both in our Report on Ages and Education and in our present Report, to include the largest number of such elements that the statistics of this or any former Census, or other authentic information, could afford.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

The Report of the Commissioners of Public Instruction in 1834 affords but few means of comparison between the educational condition of the various religious communions then and that of the same communions in 1861. As regards, however, the education of the people at large the case is different, the returns for the year 1861 showing an increase in the means of instruction, and a corresponding increase in the number of those under instruction. In the year 1834, the number of schools was stated by the Commissioners to be 9,657 for all Ireland, and the number of persons receiving instruction then to be 633,946, or 7·9 per cent. in a population of 7,954,100; whereas in 1861 the number of places of instruction was 10,580, frequented by 481,240 pupils, 8·3 per cent. in a population of 5,798,967, showing an increase of 923 in the number of schools, and an increase of 0·4 per cent. in the number of pupils in proportion to the population.

Enumeration of Schools, according to Report on Public Instruction for 1834.

The Commissioners of Public Instruction not having stated the religion of the pupils in any of the 9,657 schools, enumerated and to some short extent described in the second volume of their Report, it would not be possible to distribute, with any degree of accuracy, the 633,946 scholars of different religions amongst the several schools. Still, in some instances, the well-known character of the school marks it out with sufficient distinctness as belonging to some one religious denomination. Amongst the schools of this class belonging to the Established Church, were the parochial schools, the schools of the Society for Discountenancing Vice, the schools of the Incorporated Society, the Erasmus Smith schools, the Diocesan schools, the Royal schools, and some of private foundation. Many of these were, to a certain, and some possibly to a considerable extent, frequented by Roman Catholics and persons of "Other persuasions," but the schools themselves were distinctively Protestant, and might be said in practice to belong to the Established Church. The number of those schools was 2,302, attended by 162,953 scholars. Neither the University of Dublin, nor Maynooth College, is noticed by the Commissioners. The educational establishments distinctively Roman Catholic, existing in 1834, were those of various Roman Catholic communities of men and also of women, together with numerous private schools, which may be regarded as Roman Catholic from the fact of the Roman Catholic Catechism being included in the school course; and of these schools 1,683, attended by 100,434 scholars, were enumerated by the Commissioners of Public Instruction in 1834. Among the above, the Report of the Commissioners enables us to determine 96 Superior schools, attended by 4,240 pupils, as distinctively Protestant, by the nature of the endowment, or of the religious instruction belonging to the course; and 23 Superior schools, having 1,484 pupils, as Roman Catholic by the circumstance of their being under the Government of Roman Catholic clergymen or Nuns. The number of Superior schools distinctively Protestant in 1861, appears from our tables to have been 60, attended by 2,075 scholars, and shows, as compared with 1834, a decrease of 36 schools and 2,165 scholars. In 1861 the Roman Catholic Superior schools had reached the number of 86, with 4,962 pupils, and show an increase of 63 schools and of 3,478 scholars. This large increase in the number of Roman Catholic schools is due to the fact that whereas superior instruction had already, in 1834, been provided for members of the Established Church in chartered and endowed institutions much more nearly in proportion to their requirements than it has yet been provided by voluntary effort for other sections of the population, the higher order of schools had nearly all to be created by Roman Catholics from their own resources. The Presbyterians had not, as far as can be ascertained, any schools for their own exclusive resort in 1834. The Belfast Academy, although, perhaps, a Presbyterian establishment, in the sense that Trinity College, Dublin, belongs to the Established Church, was, relatively to the number of its scholars, the place of education most resorted to by persons of different religious denominations. In 1834 as in 1861 the Presbyterians had one divinity school—the Belfast institution. Generally speaking, they avail themselves at present of the National system of education for primary instruction, and depend for intermediate instruction upon the resources of the neighbourhood. With regard to the National system of education, then [1834] in the second year of its existence, the schools under the direction of the Board were 909 in number, attended by 118,078 pupils. Upon the whole, the religion of 263,387 out of the 633,946 pupils attending schools in Ireland during the year 1834, according to the Report of the Commissioners, may be inferred from the following statement with tolerable accuracy:—

School Returns for 1834.

According to the Returns received for the 17th May,* 1861, the distribution according to religion of the pupils of 10,170 schools, is the following:—127,173 were Protestants; and of these 75,383 belonged to the Established Church, 46,095 were Presbyterians, 5,695 belonged to other persuasions; and 339,645 were Roman Catholics; but it would be obviously unsafe to found any comparison upon the two sets of figures for 1834 and 1861. It is only by inspection and a reasoning process that we are enabled to derive results highly probable it is true, but still not certain, from the school statistics of 1834, whereas the returns for 1861 present facts by way of statement not of inference, and with a degree of certainty as great as it is possible to attain in matters of the kind. The number of pupils whose religious profession may probably be inferred from the Report of the Commissioners of 1834, amounts to considerably less than one-half of the entire school-going population, and leaves a balance of as many as 370,559 whose religion cannot be at all determined. In the Tables for 1861, on the contrary, the division according to religions of persons under instruction, embraces the entire number of persons so circumstanced.

School Returns, May, 1861.

Table XII., next following, corresponds with Table XXVII., page 44 of the Report on Ages and Education, and gives, for the four provinces in addition, the religion of the pupils in the several classes of schools during the week which ended April 13th, in, perhaps, a less complicated form, omitting the ages and percentages.

Table XIII., on page 46, gives the total population of each religious denomination; the population of each between 5 and 15 years of age; the number and ages of pupils in primary and superior schools respectively, and the number of students in colleges at the time of taking the Census.

Table XIV., on page 47, shows the proportion per cent. which the pupils between certain ages bear to the population of their respective churches.

These Tables may be analysed shortly thus:—The total number of pupils in attendance during the week ended April 13th, 1861, was 436,873, of which number 75,653 were members of the Established Church, 310,020 Roman Catholics, 45,597 Presbyterians, and 5,603 of "all other persuasions." Of those receiving instruction in primary schools during the week referred to, 67,961 were Protestants of the Established Church, 298,611 Roman Catholics, 43,599 Presbyterians, and 4,345 of "all other persuasions." The 67,961 members of the Established Church were distributed amongst the different classes of schools as follows:—In National Schools, 17,557; in Church Education Schools, 32,697; in Christian Brothers' schools and the like, 12; in schools under other Societies or Boards, 13,550; in Orphanages, 273; and in private schools, 3,872. The Roman Catholics under primary instruction belonged, in the following proportions, to the several classes of schools:—To National schools, 227,430; to Church Education schools, 5,953; to Christian Brothers' schools and the like, 23,254; to schools under other Societies or Boards, 6,954; to orphanages, 500; and to private schools, 34,520. The Presbyterians under primary instruction in National schools were 30,759; in Church Education schools, 6,504; in Christian Brothers' schools and the like, 3; in schools under other Societies or Boards, 3,479; in Orphanages, 12; in private schools, 2,842. The number of "all other persuasions" in National schools was 1,776; in Church Education schools, 901; in Christian Brothers' and the like, 2; in schools under other Societies or Boards, 1,265; in Orphanages, 12; in private schools, 389.

Religious Profession of Pupils in Primary Schools in April, 1861.

Of the total number (20,819) receiving instruction in superior schools, 7,433 were of the Established Church, 10,178 Roman Catholics, 1,974 Presbyterians, and 1,234 of all other persuasions. Of students in colleges the numbers returned as members of the Established Church were 259; of Roman Catholics, 1,231; of Presbyterians, 24; and of all other persuasions, 24.

Religious Profession of Pupils in Superior Schools in April, 1861.

With respect to the ages of the pupils attending the several classes of schools, we have to remark, that out of 19,868 under the age of 5 attending primary schools, 4,968 were of the Established Church, 12,300 were Roman Catholics, 2,287 Presbyterians, and 313 of "all other persuasions." Of 367,863 between 5 and 15 years old, 58,019 were of the Established Church; 266,419 Roman Catholics, 39,614 Presbyterians, and 3,811 of "all other persuasions:" and, lastly, of 26,785 aged 15 and upwards, 4,974 were of the Schools and Colleges.

Ages and Religions of the Pupils at School in April, 1861.

Established Church, 19,892 Roman Catholics, 1,698 Presbyterians, and 221 belonging to "all other persuasions." Attending superior schools there were 247 pupils under 5 years old—comprising 61 of the Established Church; 140 Roman Catholics; 26 Presbyterians; and 20 of "all other persuasions." Pupils between 5 and 15 years old attending superior schools numbered 14,674, made up of 5,531 of the Established Church; 6,740 Roman Catholics; 1,481 Presbyterians; and 922 of "all other persuasions." The pupils over 15 years of age in attendance at this class of schools were 5,898—of Established Church, 1,841; Roman Catholics, 3,298; Presbyterians, 467; and 292 of "all other persuasions." The number of students in attendance at colleges during the week ended April 13th, 1861, was found to be 1,538, of whom 89 were under 15 years of age, and 1,449 were 15 years old and upwards; of the 89 under 15 years of age, one was a member of the Established Church, the remainder (88) were Roman Catholics; and of the 1,449 who were 15 years old and upwards, 258 were of the Established Church; 1,143 were Roman Catholics; 24 were Presbyterians; and 24 belonged to "other persuasions."

Percentage of Pupils of each Religious Profession to total Population of same.

The percentage of members of the Established Church receiving instruction in primary schools was 9·8; those attending superior schools, 1·1 per cent.; those in colleges, 0·04; and the sum of all these, 10·9 per cent. of the population belonging to the Established Church. Roman Catholics in primary schools were 6·6 per cent.; in superior schools, 0·2; in colleges, 0·03, and altogether 6·9 per cent. of the Roman Catholic population; Presbyterians in primary schools were 8·3 per cent.; in superior schools, 0·4; in colleges, too few to be represented by an appreciable decimal, and altogether 8·7 per cent. of the Presbyterian population. The pupils of "all other persuasions" in primary schools were 5·5 per cent., in superior schools 1·6 per cent., and under instruction of all kinds, 7·1 per cent of the population of that class.

Upon this branch of the subject we submit, on page 48, Table XV., requiring little analysis, and which shows for counties, large towns, provinces, and all Ireland, the proportions in which the school-going population is composed of members of the principal religious bodies.

Percentage of Pupils of each Religious Profession.

In all the counties and towns, with the exception of Fermanagh, the members of the Established Church form the minority of attendants at school. In that county their percentage is highest, 51·5; it is lowest, 3·9, in the county of Clare. The Roman Catholics constitute the great majority of pupils in thirty-six out of the forty-four divisions in this Table, the exceptions being the counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, and Tyrone, and the towns of Carrickfergus and Belfast. Their highest percentage is in the county of Clare, 95·9, and the lowest in the county of the town of Carrickfergus, 8·2. The Presbyterians have the majority in the counties of Antrim and the county of the town of Carrickfergus. Their percentage is largest in the latter, where it reaches 58·2. In some places, as in Belfast and the counties of Down and Londonderry, they form an important minority. In four counties, however, their percentage does not exceed 0·1. The attendants at school of all other persuasions have their highest percentage, 10·, in the county of the town of Carrickfergus. It cannot be appreciably represented in the counties of Clare and Meath, while in several others it does not exceed 0·1, and in very many does not reach 0·9. Of the entire school attendance in Ireland, the members of the Established Church have 17·3 per cent., the Roman Catholics 71·, Presbyterians 10·4, and all other persuasions 1·3 per cent. The percentage

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

Per centage of Pupils of each Religious Profession.

Table XVI., commencing on page 50, is identical with Table XXVIII., on page 46 of the Report on Ages and Education, save in so far as it gives the religious denominations of the pupils in the several classes of educational institutions. The information comprises the number and classification of schools and other places of instruction in Ireland from which returns were received for the 17th day of May, 1861, together with the religious denomination of the pupils.

Pursuing for this Table the analysis which was made of the corresponding Table in the Report on Ages and Education, we find that from the four Colleges of Universities, Dublin, Cork, Belfast, and Galway, and from the "Catholic University" House, in the City of Dublin, 693 students were returned for the 17th of May, and that of this number 253 were members of the Established Church, 165 Roman Catholics, 215

Number and Religious Profession of Students at Colleges on 17th of May, 1861.

Presbyterians, and 60 of "all other persuasions." Of the members of the Established Church, 132 belonged to Trinity College, Dublin; 32 to the Queen's College, Cork; 56 to the Queen's College, Belfast; and 33 to the Queen's College, Galway. Of the Roman Catholics, 5 were returned from Trinity College, Dublin; 14 from the "Catholic University" House; 40 from the Queen's College, Cork; 22 from the Queen's College, Belfast; and 84 from the Queen's College, Galway. Four Presbyterians, and 6 of other persuasions were returned from Trinity College; 1 Presbyterian, and 4 of other persuasions from the Queen's College, Cork; 191 Presbyterians, and 43 of other persuasions from the Queen's College, Belfast; and 19 Presbyterians, and 7 of other persuasions from the Queen's College, Galway. We are sensible that this return represents with extreme inadequacy the educational position of Trinity College, since it takes no account of the non-resident students, whose number must be very considerable, as the total of students for the year 1861, as given by the University Calendar, amounted to 1,073, from which if we deduct 147 residents, the remainder, 926, will represent with sufficient probability the number of non-residents. With regard to the Colleges of the Queen's University, in which attendance at lectures is compulsory upon all students, the return is, of course, more accurate, and, as already observed in our Report on Ages and Education, page 17, the constitution of the "Catholic University" is not sufficiently known to afford means of saying what is the real value of the return from that institution. The 1,161 students attending the eight Colleges for professional education, without resort to Universities, were all Roman Catholics, of which number 519 were returned from the Royal College of Maynooth; 212 from the Missionary College of "All Hallows," near Dublin—168 of whom were returned from the College situated at Drumcondra, and 44 from the branch at Stillorgan; 39 from Holycross College, also in the vicinity of Dublin; 117 from St. Patrick's College, Carlow; 141 from St. Kyran's College, in Kilkenny City; 10 from the Augustinian College at Callan, in the County of Kilkenny; 71 from St. John's College, Waterford; and 52 from St. Macartan's College, Monaghan; the first four of which establishments are for the special education of the Roman Catholic clergy, while the remainder, although primarily for the same purpose, have the secular or non-professional part of their courses open to lay students. No return was received for the 17th day of May from the Belfast Institution.

Religious Profession of Pupils attending "Superior" Schools on 17th of May, 1861.

Of the 4,298 scholars attending 98 classical schools under the government of Societies or Boards, 1,842 belonged to the Established Church, 1,984 were Roman Catholics, 188 Presbyterians, and 284 of all other persuasions. The 6,048 scholars attending 203 private Classical schools, were composed as follows:—Established Church, 2,387; Roman Catholics, 3,134; Presbyterians, 328; all others, 199. Amongst the 155 scholars attending seven superior female schools under Societies or Boards, 108 were members of the Established Church, 2 Presbyterians, 42 belonged to the Society of Friends, and 3 to "all other persuasions." The pupils of Convent schools of this class, 2,469 in number, of whom 39 were males, were all Roman Catholics. The 471 male and 254 female pupils attending sixteen mixed schools, under the government of Societies or Boards, include 287 members of the Established Church, 161 males and 126 females; 25 Roman Catholics, 16 males and 9 females; 311 Presbyterians, 228 males and 83 females; and of all other persuasions, 66 males and 36 females; 6,620 scholars, of whom 2,442 were males and 4,178 females, attending 280 private schools of this class comprised 2,348 members of the Established Church—734 males and 1,614 females; 2,691 Roman Catholics, of whom 1,026 were males and 1,665 females; 1,099 Presbyterians—510 males and 589 females; and of all other persuasions, 482, of whom 172 were males and 310 females.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

Religious Profession of Pupils attending "Primary" Schools on 17th May, 1861.

Of the 304,162 pupils returned from 5,663 National schools, the members of the Established Church amounted to 17,785, of whom 9,877 were males and 7,908 females; the Roman Catholics numbered 253,253, of whom 122,545 were males and 130,708 females; the Presbyterians were 31,148 (16,913 males and 14,235 females), and those of all other persuasions were 1,976—consisting of 1,136 males and 840 females.

The 43,842 pupils attending 1,450 Church Education Society and Parochial schools comprised 16,301 male and 15,505 female members of the Established Church (31,806); 2,513 males and 2,375 females (4,888) of the Roman Catholic Church; 3,175 male and 3,166 female (6,341) Presbyterians; and 443 males and 364 females of other persuasions.

The pupils in 131 schools under the Christian Brothers or other Roman Catholic communities, male and female, unconnected with the National Board, amounted to 25,819, of whom 17,155 were males and 8,664 females, comprising 13 male and 2 female members of the Established Church, and 1 Methodist, a male; and 25,803 Roman Catholics, of whom 17,141 were males and 8,662 females.

In the 657 primary schools under various other Societies or Boards, the pupils were divided as follows:—of the Established Church, 13,445 (7,247 males and 6,198 females); Roman Catholics, 7,080 (4,262 males and 2,818 females); Presbyterians, 3,302 (1,742 males and 1,560 females); and 1,272 of all other persuasions (700 males and 572 females). In 22 orphanages, 858 pupils were thus composed:—of the Established Church, 246 (107 males and 139 females); Roman Catholics, 588 (127 males, 461 females); Presbyterians, 12 females; Methodists, 12 females. Lastly, the 43,624 pupils attending 1,504 private primary schools were composed as follows:—of the Established Church, 4,168 (2,132 males, 2,036 females); Roman Catholics, 36,088 (21,082 males, 15,006 females); Presbyterians, 2,996 (1,472 males, 1,524 females); all others, 372 (154 males and 218 females). Of the total 466,818, pupils, returned as attending 10,170 places of instruction on the 17th May, 1861, the Religious Professions were as follow:—Of the Established Church, 41,021 males, 34,362 females (75,383); Roman Catholics, 175,111 males, 164,534 females (339,645); Presbyterians, 24,752 males, 21,343 females (46,095); and of all other persuasions, 3,208 males and 2,487 females (5,695).

Number of Primary Schools under Societies or Boards, and Pupils in attendance on 17th May, 1861.

The County Tables (see page 629), founded upon the return for the 17th May, refer, as was stated in the Report on Ages and Education, page 45, each of the more important schools in the several groups to the Board or other Government under which it may be placed. The following provincial and general summary of the analysis of those Tables, beginning at page 54, shows more especially the composition of those groups of schools said to be under "Christian Brothers and other Roman Catholic Communities" and under "other Societies or Boards," &c., &c.

The class of primary schools under "Christian Brothers and other Roman Catholic communities" appears from this summary to be composed of 63 schools of the Christian Brothers, with 15,509 pupils; 8 Monastic schools, unconnected with the National Board, and having 286 pupils; one male school under the religious order of Roman Catholic clergymen called "Oblates," with 193 pupils; 6 schools belonging to the Charitable Society of St. Vincent de Paul, with 211 pupils; one to the "Society of the Queen of Charity," with 16 pupils; 45 Convent Schools, with 9,050 pupils; one male school in Church-street, parish of St. Michan, city of Dublin, with 109 pupils, under the care of the Franciscan Friars; the institution for Deaf Mutes at Cabragh, in the suburbs of Dublin city, under the care of the Christian Brothers, but classed apart from their ordinary schools, with 122 pupils; the institution for the male blind at Glasnevin, with 42 inmates, under the care of a Roman Catholic Brotherhood;* St. Joseph's industrial school, Fairview, Clontarf, under the care of the "Dames de St. Louis," with 19 pupils; the High Park Reformatory for females (Roman Catholic), with 31 inmates; and two schools in St. Thomas's parish, city of Dublin, with 231 pupils, tabulated by mistake with the above, making in all 25,819 scholars (17,155 males and 8,664 females.) The Reformatory for male Roman Catholics, at Glencree, in the county Wicklow, containing 235 pupils, was tabulated under the head of "Other Societies or Boards."

The class under "Other Societies or Boards" is much more variously composed, including societies of nearly all persuasions, and some unconnected with any. By far the most numerous and important groups of this class belong to societies in connexion with the Established Church; some chartered and endowed, and others maintained by voluntary contributions. Of the former, the most important are the four Blue Coat Hospital Schools with 151 pupils; the 110 schools upon the foundation of Erasmus Smith, with 4,416 pupils; and the 8 Incorporated Society's schools, with 273 pupils. In addition to these, as many as 50 schools, attended by 2,159 scholars, were returned as "endowed," and comprise several establishments, subject to the inspection of various Boards. The London Corporations have 23 schools in the province of Ulster, frequented by 826 pupils. Several voluntary societies also are connected with the Established Church, the principal of which are the "Hibernian Marine Society," "Irish Reformation Society," "Irish Society," "Islands and Coast Society," "Ladies' Belfast Association," "Ladies' London Hibernian Society," and "Irish Church Mission Society," numbering in all 110 schools, and attended by 3,541 scholars. Various Dissenting bodies—as the Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, and Society of Friends—maintain schools, numbering in all 56, and attended by 1,377 pupils. Schools to the number of 60 were classed as Charity and Ragged Schools, and were attended by 3,192 pupils. Institutions for Deaf Mutes are four in number, one of which, that at Claremont, in the county of Dublin, with 56 pupils, is in connexion with the Established Church; the school for Roman Catholic Deaf Mutes, at St. Joseph's, Cabragh, in the suburbs of Dublin city, containing 122 males—is under the direction of the Christian Brothers; the female school for Deaf and Dumb at St. Mary's, Cabragh, contained 108; the latter has been tabulated as a "Convent School;" and the Ulster Institution in the town of Belfast, containing 99 pupils, 32 of whom belonged to the Established Church, and 67 were Presbyterians; all of which have already been referred to in our Report on the Status of Disease. The orphanages, 22 in number, contained 107 male and 139 female pupils belonging to the Established Church, 127 male and 461 female pupils belonging to the Roman Catholic Church, 12 female Presbyterians, and 12 female Methodists.

Prison, Workhouse, and Re-

The principal remaining groups are those of the Prison and Workhouse Schools, not in connexion with any Educational Board, and the Reformatory Schools. In the first named of these there were 83 members of the Established Church (68 males and 15 females); 482

Roman Catholics (347 males and 135 females); 16 Presbyterians (14 males and 2 females), and 1 male Socialist. In the second, 170 members of the Established Church, 85 males and 85 females; 727 Roman Catholics, 378 males and 349 females; and 38 Presbyterians, 19 males and 19 females; there were none of any of the "other persuasions." Lastly, in the Reformatory Schools, the number of Established Church Protestants was 35 (14 males and 21 females); of Roman Catholics, 314 (279 males and 35 females). There were no returns received from the Reformatories at Spark's Lake, in the county of Monaghan; the Malone, near Belfast; or from St. Joseph's, in the city of Limerick, for the 17th day of May; the number of inmates in these Reformatories, on the night of the 7th April, 1861, was 18 Protestants and 46 Roman Catholics. formatory Schools.

Amongst superior schools, the group of Classical schools under Societies or Boards is made up for the greater part, of schools in connexion with the Established Church. These include one Blue Coat Hospital School, having 20 pupils; 13 Diocesan Schools with 280 pupils; 28 returned as "Endowed," and for the most part under the supervision of the Clare-street Board; 14 upon the foundation of Erasmus Smith with 620 scholars; 8 belonging to the Incorporated Society with 426 pupils; 1 belonging to the Irish Society with 31 pupils; 1 to the Irish Church Mission with 42 pupils; and 6 Royal Schools, with 272 pupils. Out of the 5,178 pupils attending classical schools under Societies or Boards, 2,009 were Roman Catholic, 2,237 Protestants of the Established Church, and 932 of other persuasions. The Society of Friends had 3 schools, with 112 pupils, and the Wesleyan Methodists, 9 schools, with 305 pupils. The other schools of this order, belonging to some of the less numerous Protestant communities or to other associations, do not seem to require special observation. The Roman Catholic classical schools under Societies or Boards consist of schools under the direction of religious orders, or congregations of the Roman Catholic clergy—as Augustinians, Carmelites, Dominicans, Jesuits, Marists, Oblates, Trappists, and Vincentians; those schools were 20 in number, with 1,649 pupils. The superior female schools under Societies or Boards, 7 in number, with Superior Schools under Societies or Boards.

Roman Catholic Superior Schools.

155 pupils, belong (with the exception of one school with 42 pupils, for the Society of Friends, and one with 17 pupils, belonging to the Moravians), to the Established Church. The Convent schools (superior) were 51, attended by 2,469 pupils, of whom 2,430 were females and 39 males. Amongst the "private classical schools" exists the greater part of an important group of Roman Catholic establishments, to which the word "private" is scarcely applicable, but which we have so classed as being neither under the government of "Societies," nor deriving support from public funds. These are episcopal seminaries existing in several of the Roman Catholic dioceses, under the immediate and exclusive government of the bishop. They correspond generally with what in France are called "Petits Séminaires," or schools in which candidates for the priesthood study their "humanities," or the liberal secular education which precedes their professional course. In all those establishments, however, except Holycross Seminary, the larger proportion of the pupils, as is generally the case in France and in other Roman Catholic countries, are not destined for the ecclesiastical state, but follow their secular studies in common with the clerical pupils. These establishments, fifteen in number, are known by the following names :—(Diocese of Dublin), Holycross Seminary, Clonliffe, near Dublin, 39 students; (Kildare and Leighlin), St. Patrick's College, Carlow, 117 students; (Ossory), St. Kyran's College, Kilkenny, 141 students; (Ferns), St. Peter's College, Wexford, 110 pupils ; (Armagh), St. Patrick's College, Armagh, 42 pupils; (Clogher), St. Ma-

‡ There were not any returns received from the Reformatories at Spark's Lake, in the county of Monaghan; the Malone, near Belfast; or the St. Joseph's, in the city of Limerick, for the 17th day of May; the number of inmates in these institutions returned for the week ended 13th of April was 64.

namely, those of Carlow, Thurles, and Kilkenny, being affiliated under that name to the University of London; and St. Macartan's, in the diocese of Clogher, with St. John's, in Waterford, having, it is stated, a school of divinity, or professional course. The remainder, as already observed in the Report upon Ages and Education, page 48, we have not thought it advisable to class as colleges, owing to the fact of their not including a full professional course. stances, popularly looked upon as Roman Catholic, and that all the schools of the Church Education Society are considered to be exclusively Protestant, we put aside the entire of those great classes of primary schools, when endeavouring to compute the number of schools which may be treated as distinctively Protestant or distinctively Roman Catholic, because the principles upon which the National system professes to be conducted would seem to exclude its schools from either category; and because the Church Education Society, although giving Scriptural education to all its pupils, and doctrinal teaching to members of the Established Church, does not insist upon the latter for pupils of other persuasions. Leaving out of consideration, then, the National Schools and those of the

‡ There was not a return received for the Queen's College, Galway, for the 17th day of May; the number of Students returned for the week ended 13th of April, was 143.

"Primary" Schools.

Church Education Society, the primary schools which by their constitution appear to be distinctively Protestant of the Established Church were 353 in number, attended by 11,999 scholars. The Roman Catholic schools of the like kind were 177, attended by 28,244 scholars. The Presbyterians, as we have already stated, availing themselves very generally of the National system of Education, have few primary schools of the kind indicated; and those limited strictly to various other persuasions were 42, attended by 1,132 scholars.

Lastly, of the number under primary instruction, 67,465 were members of the Established Church, forming 9·7 per cent. of the population of their own religion, and 1·2 per cent. of the general population; 327,700 were Roman Catholics, forming 7·3 per cent. of their own population, and 5·6 of the population at large; 43,799 were Presbyterians, forming 8·4 per cent. of the Presbyterian population, and 0·8 per cent. of the population at large; and 4,440 belonged to all other persuasions, being 5·8 per cent. of the group so called, and 0·1 per cent. of the general population.

Number and percentage of Pupils at Superior Schools.

Of those under superior instruction, 7,698 were members of the Established Church, and formed 1·1 per cent. of the Established Church population, and 0·1 per cent. of the entire population; the Roman Catholics amounted to 10,703, forming 0·2 per cent. of the Roman Catholic population and nearly a like percentage of the total population of Ireland; the Presbyterians amounted to 2,100, being 0·4 per cent. of the Presbyterians, and 0·04 per cent. of the whole population. The number of pupils of all other persuasions under superior instruction was 1,202, or 1·6 per cent. of that portion of the population, and 0·02 per cent. of the population at large.

Number and percentage of Students attending Colleges.

The numbers of the various religious denominations returned as receiving collegiate instruction on the 17th day of May were as follow:—Established Church, 220; Roman Catholic, 1,242; Presbyterian, 196; and all others, 53. Of these the Established Church Protestants represent 0·032 per cent. of their own, and 0·003 per cent. of the general population; the Roman Catholics 0·027 per cent. of their own, and 0·02 per cent. of the general population; Presbyterians, 0·037 per cent. of their own, and 0·003 per cent. of the general population; and all others, 0·068 per cent. of their own numbers.

Degrees of Education among the members of the several Religious Professions.

In our observations at page 40 upon the relative state of instruction in the several religious bodies, as indicated by the percentages of ignorance in each, we adverted to some of the circumstances which may be admitted as accounting for the high proportion of the instructed in most of the Protestant communities, as compared with that diffused amongst the Roman Catholic—the great body of the people. Many of those circumstances will be found equally applicable to an explanation of the high proportion of attendance at school, which the tables exhibit in favour of the Protestant communities. Without assigning other reasons,—superior social position, vastly greater affluence, and far more generally diffused competence of fortune, with numbers comparatively so much smaller than those of the Roman Catholics, enable, and even require, the members of the Protestant Churches, in their various degrees, to provide for their children instruction of a kind suitable to their rank, in greater abundance, and with more regularity than can be attained by those less favourably circumstanced. So far for instruction in general; but when we come to treat of the different classes of instruction, the consideration of each class is affected by special reasons of its own. Some of these reach far back into history; but confining ourselves to those which grow out of existing circumstances, in relation to the state of superior and university teaching amongst the various religious bodies, it appears to us that while the great inferiority in the relative numbers of Roman Catholics receiving superior instruction to the numbers of their Protestant fellow-countrymen is susceptible of the same explanation which has been assigned to the generally low proportion of instructed Roman Catholics; the high proportion of members of the Established Church receiving intermediate instruction is due, in a great measure, to the numerous endowments in connexion with that Church, and to the relation existing between many of these endowments and the University of Dublin.

Roman Catholic Students in Universities.

The very small proportion of Roman Catholic students receiving university instruction requires perhaps more explanation, because they are taken from the class of those undergoing intermediate instruction, which has an absolute majority over the Protestants of the same class. If, however, we deduct from the number of Roman Catholics pursuing Classical studies, those who pass to the Colleges of Maynooth, All Hallows, and several Continental seminaries, to follow up their studies preparatory for the priesthood, the disproportion will appear less, when we take into account that nearly all the candidates for the ministry of the Established Church graduate in the University of Dublin, to which they contribute a very large proportion of its students.

Average attendance of Students in Universities.

While admitting the entire inadequacy of the Census returns to represent the persons actually under university teaching in this country, yet upon referring to page 16 of the Report on Ages and Education, and taking an average for ten years of the numbers graduating in the University of Dublin and Queen's University, we obtain a representation of the number receiving university instruction yearly in Ireland not very far removed from the truth. That average is 335 or 0·006 per cent. of the entire population. This being so, we regret to say that, as compared with other European countries, Ireland occupies a lower place than several, and namely, than Prussia, Austria, or Belgium; the first-mentioned of those countries* having had in 1852 0·028 per cent.; the second† in 1853–4, 0·026 per cent.; and the last‡ in 1850 0·017 per cent. of her population engaged in university studies; so that whatever advantage any one section of the Irish people may seem to have over any other in this respect, much yet remains to be done by all before the entire population of Ireland can take a prominent rank amongst civilized countries, in the cultivation of liberal studies.

Occupations.

Religions and Occupations.

There is, perhaps, no branch of statistical inquiry less capable of satisfactory classification than that which deals with the Occupations of the people. The various heads of occupation, it is true, are capable of scientific arrangement upon broad and comprehensive principles; but upon descending to details, it will be easily understood that numerous occupations will range almost equally well under several heads, and that classification, under such circumstances, becomes, to a certain extent, arbitrary. The principal difficulty, however, arises from the circumstance that in many cases the number included under a given occupation cannot be taken to represent with sufficient accuracy the portion of the population actually engaged in the specified pursuit. This fact is ascribable to various causes, amongst which may be enumerated,—first:—the perhaps unavoidably comprehensive character of several designations which, if submitted to analysis, would be found applied to persons not strictly entitled to them; secondly:—the very general desire of men to dignify their pursuits, which prompts the farmer to style himself a landed proprietor, the shopkeeper a merchant, and the music-master a professor; and thirdly:—the union of several professions or occupations in the same person. This last is probably the most general cause of inaccuracy or incompleteness in the Occupation Tables. Thus it may easily be understood that an individual might be, at the same time, a landed proprietor, a land agent, a tenant farmer, a barrister, and a magistrate. Out of all these designations he will choose, it is probable, that which he considers most honourable, although it may not be that by which he gains his livelihood, or, in other words, which is his real occupation.

We have attempted, notwithstanding these difficulties, to classify the occupations of the people with due regard to the progress of modern statistical science, and upon principles which will be more fully explained in our General Report. Accompanying the present Report, but framed upon the same principles, are provincial and general summaries, combining the occupations and the religion of the inhabitants. Re-casting in a more popular form the information contained in those tables, we have thought it sufficient for the purposes of this Report to distribute the people according to their occupations, into the following ten classes.—1. Landed Proprietors; 2. Farmers and Agriculturists generally; 3. Persons engaged in Commerce, Manufactures, and Mechanical Trades; 4. Members of the Learned Professions, distinguishing the Clerical, the Legal, and the Medical; 5. Members of other liberal professions, as Architecture, Engineering, Literature, and Music; 6. Persons engaged in Teaching; 7. Persons engaged in the Government and Civil Service of the Country; 8. Members of the Military and Naval Services; 9. Miscellaneous; and 10. Unspecified. Classified thus broadly, and subject to the observations already made respecting the accuracy of the returns, the inhabitants of Ireland, at the date of the Census, would seem to be distributed as in the table on the following page, according to their several religions and occupations.

It might have been anticipated, that the members of the Established Church alone, without mentioning those of other Protestant denominations, would form a large majority of the landed proprietors. Nevertheless, according to the Census returns, the landed proprietors who belong to the Established Church outnumber the Roman Catholics by not more than 468, the former being represented as 4,044, and the latter as 3,576. It is difficult to suppose that the several causes to which we have alluded as interfering with the accuracy of the returns of occupations have not been largely concerned in producing the result just stated, a result at variance with general belief and experience. It seems highly probable that many, both Protestants and Roman Catholics, have erroneously assumed the designation of "landed proprietor," instead of "tenant-farmer or leaseholder," and that the amount of such errors must be greater amongst the Roman Catholics in proportion to their numbers. It must be borne in mind also, that the returns as to "Occupation" do not represent half the inhabitants of Ireland; as many as 690,848 Protestants out of 1,293,309; and 2,401,782 Roman Catholics out of 4,505,265, having been returned without any specified occupation. The numbers however so returned include many thousands who could not under any circumstances be expected to find their place amongst those who gain a livelihood by occupation;—thus, amongst the unoccupied, were 890,904 males under 15 years old, and 2,100,725 females of all ages, making a total of 2,991,629 out of 3,092,630. Amongst the unoccupied, Protestants as well as Roman Catholics, it cannot be doubted that some of each religion, in the ratio of their respective numbers, must be taken to have belonged to the class of landed proprietors; and it is not impossible, at all events, that the omissions of the proper designation may have been more numerous amongst Protestants than amongst Roman Catholics. Several illustrations might be given explanatory of the way in which the number of landed proprietors has come to be understated in the Census Returns, but we content ourselves with referring to the cases of Peers, Baronets, and other persons of rank; officers in the Army or Navy, minors either resident upon their estates, or, as more commonly happens, at school or college; and absentee proprietors, including English noblemen and others,—often the possessors of large estates in this country. It seems only reasonable to suppose, that the number of Protestants thus left out of account in reckoning the landed proprietors of Ireland, is more considerable than that of the Roman Catholics similarly omitted, because in the several classes of persons just mentioned, the members of the Established Church are certainly the more numerous. On the other hand it may be urged that the sales under the Incumbered and Landed Estates Court, which have operated so largely to subdivide real property, have multiplied the number of Roman Catholics holding estates of fee simple or other estates of inheritance in comparatively small tracts of land, but yet sufficient, in the opinion of the owners, to entitle them to be styled landed proprietors. The Census Returns, however, afford us no means of determining either the extent of land, or the nature of the estate therein, belonging to any of the individuals described as "Landed Proprietor." The members of the Established Church form a considerable majority of all the liberal professions, except the clerical, in which the Roman Catholics are somewhat more numerous. The members of the last-named profession have been returned to us as 6,278; and of these 3,014 appear as Roman Catholics; 2,265 as of the Established Church; 677 as Presbyterians; and 322 as of all other persuasions. In the profession of the law, out of 758 barristers, 498 were returned as of the Established Church; 216 of the Roman Catholic; 31 of the Presbyterian; and 13 of all other persuasions. 1,882 attorneys were divided as follows: 1,078 belonged to the Established Church; 674 were Roman Catholics; 96 Presbyterians; and 34 of other Protestant persuasions. The medical profession, out of a total of 2,358 physicians and surgeons, contains 1,219 members of the Established Church; 761 Roman Catholics; 293 Presbyterians; and 85 of other persuasions. The total number of persons returned as apothecaries is 419, including 171 members of the Established Church; 210 Roman Catholics; 27 Presbyterians; and 11 of other Protestant persuasions; it is hardly necessary to observe that this number (419) does not represent the total of those who practise pharmacy in Ireland, amongst whom a large number of apothecaries hold a medical degree or licence.

In the occupation of teaching, the Roman Catholics, as might be anticipated, are more numerous than any other section of the people, amounting to 11,034 out of a total of 19,346; the members of the Established Church being represented by 5,940, the Presbyterians by 1,727, and all other persuasions by 645. Amongst the farmers and agriculturists generally, the Roman Catholics form the great majority, and have been returned as amounting to 801,296, in a total of 969,636; the Presbyterians follow in this class with 82,972; the members of the Established Church with 77,403; and those of all other persuasions with 7,905. In the manufacturing, commercial, and mechanical classes, the Roman Catholics constitute the majority, being 558,591 out of a total of 815,356. The members of the Established Church come next in order with 123,194; the Presbyterians next with 113,043; and all others with 20,528. It is worthy perhaps of observation that amongst the Presbyterians the female population under this head is somewhat in excess of the male. Amongst the civil servants of the State the Roman Catholics are in a majority, ascribable in a great measure to the larger proportion of members of that religion in the Constabulary and Metropolitan Police Forces, who constituted more than 67 per cent. of all in the civil employment of the country: the respective numbers are—members of the Established Church, 6,187; Roman Catholics, 13,022; Presbyterians, 1,078; all others, 277. In the Military and Naval Services, the Protestants were in a considerable majority: the members of the Established Church being 16,110; Roman Catholics, 10,959; Presbyterians, 2,084; and all other Protestants, 1,175; and finally, as regards the miscellaneous occupations enumerated in Table XVIII., the numbers stand thus:—Protestants, 129,366; Roman Catholics, 699,772.

In closing this Report, we beg to congratulate your Excellency upon the successful accomplishment in Ireland of a work, which in the United Kingdom alone, of all civilized European countries having populations divided in religious belief, has been postponed for so long a period. It is no part of our duty to dwell upon the advantage of statistical information regarding matters of so much importance as the comparative numbers, education, and social condition of the great religious families comprising the population of the country. In order, however, that such information should have its proper value in putting a check upon loose assertion, or establishing a basis for useful argument, the accuracy and authenticity of the Census should not be subject to challenge; and this, we are happy to believe, is the case in the present instance. The statement of the religion of every individual, given now for the first time as part of the regular decennial Census, was made at a period of unusual political calm; and the few calls upon us from any part of the country for explanation or interference, while proof of a healthy earnestness, evidenced and even confirmed by their fewness, the universality of the public trust in the good faith of the Census operations.

Conclusion.

The value, whatever it may be, of the conclusions which we have thought it our duty to submit to your Excellency in this Report, as founded upon the Returns, is a thing (we need hardly observe) quite distinct from the value of the Returns themselves. In the latter nothing has been left to estimate or computation. Every figure is presumed to represent a fact; and the general coherency of our Returns on Ages and Education with those CONCLUSION. upon Religion, induces a belief that the few inevitable though undiscovered errors, which must be supposed to accompany every operation of so large a nature as the present, cannot in any way affect the character and faithfulness of the tables.

In conclusion, we beg to express the hope, in which we feel your Excellency will participate, that the disclosures now made to the various sections of the Irish people, regarding matters of such high interest to each, and upon which, up to the present, each must have been imperfectly informed, may have the effect of inspiring mutual forbearance and respect; of tempering confidence with moderation; and of stimulating all to peaceful and honourable rivalry in education, in industry, in the arts, and in every other pursuit which, while elevating the character of individual religious bodies, cannot fail to effect the same end for the great national family of which they are but the component parts.

We have the honour to remain

Census Office, Dublin, 1861.

It is earnestly requested that the Heads of Families will see that the Answers to the several Queries contained in these Tables are distinctly and correctly given, since upon the accuracy of the answers the value of the Census must mainly depend. The information will be published in General Abstracts, only, and strict care taken that the Returns are not used for the gratification of curiosity, or any other object than perfecting the Census.

The Enumerator, on receiving the Returns, is on no account to permit them to be inspected by any person, except the Officer of the District, to whom he is instructed to deliver them without delay, in order that they may be transmitted to the Census Office. The Returns will, of course, be considered by the Officer as strictly confidential.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR FILLING THESE TABLES.

The Enumerator will call for this Return as soon as possible after the night of the 7th of April, when he will assist such persons as may not be able to fill it themselves. But when competent, it is requested that the Head of the Family shall fill, or cause it to be filled, immediately after the said night, in order that the Enumerator may not be delayed when he calls for it.

This Return is divided into Three Tables.

The 1st TABLE is for those persons of each Family, the Visitors, and Servants, who slept or abode in the same house on the night of Sunday, the 7th of April.

By a "Family" is meant either one person living on his or her own means of support, or several persons united under one head, and having a common means of support;—therefore when there are several Families in one house, the Enumerator will leave a separate Form for each.

Religious Profession.—To prevent errors, and in order that each individual may be correctly enumerated, under this head, it is particularly requested that Protestants, who are members of the United Church of England and Ireland shall describe themselves as of the "Established Church," that members of the Roman Catholic Church shall describe themselves as "Roman Catholics," and that Protestants of the Presbyterian Church shall use the word "Presbyterian" opposite to their respective names. Individuals belonging to any other Religious Denomination or Sect are requested to describe themselves by that particular name or title by which they are most generally known.

Occupations.—In order to arrive at a correct classification of the employments of the people, attention is requested to the following observations:—

One general principle which should be kept in mind is, that each person will be best described to whose name is annexed his or her principal means of support: thus, "Landed Proprietor,"—"House Owner,"—"Fund" or "Stock Holder,"—"Annuitant," &c., will best define the more independent classes, whose principal means are derived from any of these or similar sources.

Professions.—A person deriving his income from a profession should state its particular nature; and professional men who are occupied with other avocations, should define them. Clergymen of every religious denomination should be described according to their Rank and Station; Barristers and Attorneys, whether they practise; Medical Men, what branch of the profession they follow; Military and Naval Officers, retired from the service, should give their rank, also adding the terms "Retired Officer;" Artists to mention the particular Art which they pursue.

Merchants should state the particular trade in which they are engaged, and Shopkeepers are to observe the same rule. In reference to writing Clerks, it is desirable that the description should show the nature of the office, as "Clerk in Public Office,"—"Law Clerk,"—"Clerk in Corn Merchant's Office," &c.

Manufacturers, Tradesmen, and Apprentices.—The particular branch of Manufacture with which each is connected should be stated: thus, a weaver of silk should be distinguished from a weaver of any other kind of material, by describing him as a "Silk Weaver;" in a similar manner a "Woollen Weaver," a "Linen Weaver," &c. This rule is to be also observed with respect to every other trade: as "Brass Founder," or "Iron Founder,"—"House Carpenter," or "Ship Carpenter,"—"House Painter," or "Carriage Painter, &c.

Servants and Labourers employed in Agricultural Works should be distinguished from those occupied in other ways, by stating the particular kind of Work in which each individual is usually engaged, as "Ploughman;" "Farm Labourer;" "Drainage Labourer;" "Mason's Labourer;" "Railway Labourer," &c.; and in the case of Household Servants, by giving their particular occupations.

Education.—In addition to the elementary acquirements in the English Language asked for under this head, information is also sought for with regard to the Irish Language, in order to ascertain the localities where, and the number of persons by whom, it is now spoken.

Deaf and Dumb, or Blind.—Particular inquiry is made as to the number and condition of the Deaf and Dumb, and the Blind, in the hope that public attention may be more strongly directed to the wants of the poorer classes in Ireland who are thus afflicted. Those persons only are to be returned as Blind, who are quite deprived of sight.

The 2nd TABLE is necessary in order to ascertain the number of persons belonging to each family, whether present or absent on the night of the 7th April. The absent members, if in Ireland, will of course be accounted for in the General Enumeration for the houses where they may happen to pass that night.

The 3rd TABLE is for a Return of those persons who have Died while residing with this Family, during the last Ten years. The necessity for this is caused by the want of a General Registration of Deaths in Ireland, and consequently a defect of information for various objects useful to the community. This Table, however, will only show the Deaths which have occurred during the last Ten years in these families now living in Ireland.

Approved,
Edward Cardwell.

William Donnelly,
Registrar-General.

It is particularly requested that this Return may not be soiled or in any way injured.

When the Members of a Family are too numerous for one Form, two or more will be supplied.

City of Dublin.—The corrections at pages 12 and 24, for the parish of St. Paul and for Arran-quay Ward, are consequent on the omission of 105 inmates of the Military Prison at Arbour-hill, and 99 inmates of the Regimental Hospitals in the Royal Barracks; those at pages 17 and 22, for the parish of St. Bridget and for the Royal Exchange Ward, on the omission of 16 inmates of the Regimental Hospital in Ship-street Barracks; and those at pages 21 and 24, for the total of Dublin City, on the omission of the foregoing 220 persons.

Suburbs of Dublin City.—The corrections at page 30, for Goldenbridge Town, are consequent on the omission of 48 persons, inmates of the Regimental Hospital at Richmond Barracks; those for Portobello Town, at page 31, on the omission of 20 inmates of the Regimental Hospital of Portobello Barracks; and those at page 31, for the total of the barony of Uppercross, and of the Suburbs of the City of Dublin, on the omission of the 68 persons from the Population Tables of the two foregoing localities.

County of Dublin (exclusive of the Suburbs of Dublin).—The corrections at page 36, for the parish of St. James, and of the barony of Castleknock, at page 37, was caused by the omission of 185 inmates of the "General Military Hospital," situated in the Phœnix Park; those at page 39, for the parish of Santry, and for the barony of Coolock, from the omission of 70 persons residing in the "Incorporated Society's School-house" at Santry; those at page 44, for the parish of Monkstown, and at page 46, for the barony of Rathdown, from the circumstance of the 26 female children in the Loretto Convent at Dalkey, having been included with the population of the parish of Monkstown as well as with that of Dalkey; and those at pages 48 and 201, for the total of the County of Dublin (exclusive of the Suburbs of the City of Dublin), from the omission of the 185 inmates of the General Military Hospital, Phœnix Park (in the general Tables only); and the 70 persons in the School-house at Santry; and from the 26 children belonging to the Loretto Convent at Dalkey, having been twice registered.

County of Wicklow.—The corrections at page 194, for the parish of Powerscourt, and the barony of Rathdown, and at pages 199 and 205, for the county of Wicklow, are consequent on the omission of 235 persons in St. Kevin's Reformatory, Glencree.

Province of Leinster.—The corrections at page 205, for the Province of Leinster, are consequent on the omission of the 70 persons in the School-house at Santry, the 235 inmates of St. Kevin's Reformatory, Glencree, and the double registration of the 26 children in the Loretto Convent at Dalkey.
